

Railroad Bridge Hit By Fire

A fire on a railroad bridge over Salt Creek between Charleston and O along Sun Valley resulted in "considerable" damage to the bridge, according to District Fire Chief Mel Keller. The cause of the fire is still under investigation but three men who were seen in the area are being sought for questioning. Keller said the fire started in some brush at the bottom of the bridge and spread upward. Efforts to extinguish the blaze which took about an hour to bring under control were hampered by a lack of water. Keller said firemen strung 1,500 feet of hose and pumped water in from Oak Lake. A railroad crew was brought in from Weeping Water to repair the bridge. (Star Photo.)

Nixon Noncompliance Talk 'Idle Speculation'

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House counsel Leonard Garment dismissed as "idle speculation" Sunday whether President Nixon would refuse to comply with a Supreme Court order to surrender further Watergate evidence.

Garment said also it is "invalid as well as idle" to suggest that any such action would bring on a constitutional crisis.

But two members of the House Judiciary Committee, Reps. William Hungate, D-Mo., and David W. Dennis, R-Ind., said that a rejection of a Supreme Court decision would be viewed as "a very serious matter" by the impeachment panel.

Dennis predicted, however, that the President would abide by the court's decision.

Arguments are scheduled for July 8 on Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski's demand for tapes of 64 presidential conversations wanted for use in the Watergate cover-up trial in September.

U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica ruled for Jaworski last month, but Garment said that Nixon's chief Watergate lawyer, James D. St. Clair, is "confident about the outcome of the appeal."

Garment said that Nixon does not view himself as above the law, but that the impeachment process "is the way that the President is held within the law."

Asked then why Nixon has not complied with the House Judiciary Committee's subpoenas for more evidence, Garment replied that "Cooperation in the impeachment proceeding does not mean that he abandons the responsibilities of his office."

"Were he to accept the unilateral determination of the Congress" as to what evidence is needed, said Garment, "obviously the result of that would be that every piece of paper in the White House would be open to examination."

As to Charles W. Colson's statement in court Friday that Nixon had urged him to defame Daniel Ellsberg in 1971, Garment said: "That is something I don't know about. I can't speak with any certainty about what took place at that time." Colson was sentenced to one to three years in prison and fined $5,000 for the smear campaign against Ellsberg, and some members of the House panel have said they intend to investigate whether Nixon should be held criminally liable as well.

Garment acknowledged that Presidents — he emphasized the plural — sometimes take steps which many people "would find contrary to their own sense of what is fit and proper."

In the Ellsberg case, he said, "We have to distinguish between matters that would be . . . subject to criticism and matters which are unlawful." And "at this point, there certainly does not seem to be anything that constitutes a violation of law."

Hungate, however, said the Ellsberg issue was serious, while Dennis termed it "sort of a novel charge."

U.S. Warship In Suez

By The Associated Press

An American warship has entered the Suez Canal for the first time since the 1967 Middle East war, the U.S. Navy said Sunday.

At the same time, Israeli forces evacuated nearly all Golan Heights territory captured in the October 1973 war, and a U.N. spokesman said the troop disengagement with Syria would be completed within the next 48 hours.

The Navy said the USS Barnstable County, a 522-foot amphibious landing ship based in Little Creek, Va., steamed 45 miles from Port Said to Ismailia in six hours Saturday.

The Navy said the ship dropped anchor in Lake Timsah, off Ismailia, and will serve as a communications and logistical support center for an indefinite period.

The Navy is supervising an American salvage firm in the clearing of 10 sunken ships from the 100-mile waterway.

The first large ship to transit half of the canal since the 1967 war was the British navy command ship HMS Abdiel, which sailed from Port Said to Ismailia on May 29.

On the Golan front, the Israelis dug into new positions west of the 1967 ceasefire line, as other troops evacuated a one-mile-wide strip straddling the line and handed it over to U.N. forces.

The thin strip was the last area of the 300-square-mile Syrian bulge captured last October to be surrendered under Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's disengagement of forces plan. In two earlier phases, the Israelis pulled out of the northern and southern sectors of the Golan bulge that reached within 23 miles of Damascus, the Syrian capital.

Later, the Israeli state radio reported that Syrian soldiers operating in southern Lebanon as gun spotters near Mt. Hermon had withdrawn.

Israel had charged that the Syrians, disguised as guerrillas, had directed Syrian artillery against Israeli positions on Mt. Hermon during the October war and later during the 81-day war of attrition on the Golan Heights.

In Jerusalem, Premier Yitzhak Rabin told a meeting of Zionist leaders Israel would attack Palestinian guerrilla bases in Lebanon "in every place and at every time it deems necessary."

He said Israel would continue to strike at guerrillas despite the "double standard" of nations which have criticized Israeli air raids on Lebanon. "Israel will not be deterred by this attitude," he said.

GOP Candidate To Rely On Conservative Appeal

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story is an analysis of the coming gubernatorial campaign by The Star's political reporter.)

By DON WALTON

Star Staff Writer

ITEM: "It is an astonishing record, a record of callous disregard for Nebraska's taxpayers . . . Sen. Richard Marvel, March 4, 1974.

ITEM: "For the state at large, Gov. Exon has done a sound job of operating a state government within a reasonable budget. He pledged economy and that is what he gave the state . . . McCook Daily Gazette, Dec. 19, 1973.

ITEM: "My hope is that the conservative people will come back when they see a Batchelder name on the ballot . . . Anne Batchelder, May 16, 1974.

ITEM: "Conservatism More Important Than Party . . . We feel Exon should be returned to a second term in the Statehouse since he has done a fine job . . . McCook Daily Gazette, June 13, 1974.

Republican gubernatorial nominee Richard Marvel's apparently uphill struggle against Democratic Gov. J. James Exon will center largely on a fiscal conservative appeal to Republicans to return to the party of their choice.

Republican voters abandoned former Gov. Norbert Tiemann in large numbers in 1970, opting either for Exon or deciding to forego the election altogether.

Conservative Instincts

Appealing to the conservative instincts of GOP voters, Exon added considerable Republican support to his Democratic vote strength and unseated the one-term governor.

The McCook Daily Gazette, a generally conservative newspaper in a generally conservative and Republican town, was the only daily Nebraska newspaper to endorse Exon in his 1970 contest with Tiemann.

Despite the conservative appeal of Marvel, it is not abandoning Exon this year. Its decision tends to define the difficulty of Marvel's task.

The Gazette's editor, Allen Strunk, endorsed Exon for reelection last Dec. 19, shortly after the governor announced his candidacy for a second term and three months before Marvel formally entered the race.

Repeated Endorsement

Then, this month, taking a closer look at the two candidates, Strunk repeated that endorsement.

"We feel Exon should be returned to a second term in the Statehouse since he has done a fine job, and has been considerate of this part of the state — an attribute lacking in some former state leaders," the editorial declared.

"Actually, both men have a great deal in common. They are both conservative in philosophy and considerate of the taxpayers' pocketbook."

"Both seem to be straightforward and honest with sincere concern."

Democratic Mayors Defend Demands

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Democratic big-city mayors defended on Sunday their demands for massive federal aid against suggestions that the new assistance might only drive up inflation.

New York City Mayor Abraham Beame said the federal subsidy he seeks to hold subway and bus fares to 35 cents actually would avert a cost of living increase of as much as 1 per cent on the national level.

Los Angeles Mayor Thomas Bradley said he feels it is reasonable for his smog-ridden, auto-oriented city to seek "our fair share" of federal help in building a 240-mile mass transit system.

Beame, Bradley and four other city chief executives were interviewed on the nationally-televised NBC "Meet the Press" originating from the 42nd annual meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

In reply to questions, both Republicans and Democrats said Watergate and impeachment issues have created a log jam of urban legislation in Washington, but otherwise have not caused specific harm to the operation of their cities.

Mayors have complained at the conference, which opened Saturday and runs through Wednesday, that inflation generally is their most serious local problem, putting a critical squeeze on city budgets while citizens demand more and better services.

The conference gave preliminary approval Saturday to a resolution asking Congress for $18 billion over the next five years for construction and operation of mass transit systems. Another proposal asks for passage of an acceptable community development program bill from the current session which would cost $11.3 billion over the next three years. The measure is considered a third step in the New Federalism program that was launched 18 months ago with enactment of general revenue sharing.

Asked if such money demands won't only intensify inflation by increasing federal spending, Mayor Richard J. Lugar of Indianapolis said the administration faces potential budget cuts that could affect urban programs in any event.

Lugar, a Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, added, "If we ask for exorbitant programs, then we're asking for more trouble in inflation."

In New York, Beame has appealed both to the administration and to Congress for urgent help in avoiding a proposed transit rate increase from 35 to 60 cents a ride.

Beame defended the request by saying, "I think keeping our fare low, because we have about 1.2 billion passengers a year, not only helps New York City, but helps avoid a problem nationwide in terms of inflated costs."

Asked if there is no end to his city's seeking of federal aid, Beame said, "New York City has the need and I might say, parenthetically, New York City needs about $14.5 billion a year to the federal government and gets back roughly $2 billion or 14 cents on the dollar."

primary challenge to his governorship.

The GOP team will win back some of the conservatives, in Strunk's estimation.

Better For Marvel

"Exon will not run as strongly in McCook this time," he guesses. "I think Marvel will do better than Tiemann."

But, if the Gazette's views are typical of the political temper of most of the people in its community, Marvel's uphill climb will be very steep.

Of Exon, the Gazette said in its December endorsement: "He has done a good job for the entire State of Nebraska, and he has done a good job for Southwest Nebraska as well."

GETTING IN GEAR . . . Scott prepares for camp.

It's All In A Day's Work: Counseling Trials, Smiles

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

He's been doused with buckets of water, locked out of his cabin at night and covered with mud when on the losing side of a mudhole tug of war. But every summer Scott Kerl goes back for more.

For he's one of a rugged and hearty breed — the overnight camp counselor.

A veteran of Boy Scout and church camps himself, Scott's had a chance to see the other side of camping in the past two summers at the YMCA's Camp Kitaki in Louisville.

He quickly learned that a counselor must also be a teacher, entertainer, helper, coach, father, mother and friend to his young charges — "an exhausting job," he admits.

"So you have to do humorous things and make your own entertainment for relief," Scott confided.

Eating Blindfolded

One time he and another counselor ate all the kids' cookies on an overnight. As punishment the camp sheriff made the two culprits feed each other pudding blindfolded in front of the whole camp. "The kids went nuts," Scott recalled, laughing at the memory.

And then there was the day of the counselor hunt when the kids rang the all-clear bell early, grabbed the counselors and threw them fully-clothed into the swimming pool.

Scott would stay with his cabin group all day, accompanying them to various activities like riding, archery, swimming and athletics. At the end of each week, after a day's respite from the company of his active charges, Scott would greet a whole new cabin-full of excited campers. And so on all summer long.

Responsibility Learned

Some of the kids are away from home for the first time, Scott indicated, and it is often demanding for them to try so many new things at once. "They learn a lot of responsibility in a short time," he noted.

The counselor, stressed Scott, "must see that kids have the total experience of being at camp."

A native of Wayne and a recent graduate in social work of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Scott, 21, will be at Camp Esther K. Newman near Louisville this summer.

Today's Chuckle

Summer is the time when you can't wait to get the kids out from underfoot but can't stop wondering where in the world they are.

Kidnap Case Unsolved, But Family Still Hopes

THREE FORKS, Mont. (AP) — Seven-year-old Susan Jaeger was sleeping in a tent with an older sister and two brothers when someone slashed a hole in the side of the tent.

When the other children woke up, Susan was gone.

A year later, no trace has been found of the little girl from Michigan who vanished during a camping trip with her four brothers and sisters, her parents and grandparents.

Except for the man who telephoned Susan's parents and a deputy sheriff's wife and demanded a ransom.

Mr. and Mrs. William Jaeger don't like to talk about those two telephone calls. But they say the man knows something about Susie, some small bit of information they overlooked in giving her description to police. They won't say what it is, but apparently no one except the family knew about it.

Twice in the last six years, campers in the same southwest Montana area have died in still unsolved murders.

A Boy Scout, 12-year-old Michael E. Raney, was stabbed and bludgeoned to death in 1968 while he slept in a tent just a few yards from where Susan disappeared. Police said the murderer got into the tent by slashing a hole in it.

Last February, 19-year-old Sandra Smallegan disappeared from Manhattan, a tiny town a dozen miles from the campground. A week later more than 1,000 splintered and charred bone fragments were found on an abandoned homestead in the desolate Horseshoe Hills.

Police say they have no evidence to link the Raney and the Smallegan cases to each other or to Susan's disappearance.

Susan's parents refuse to believe their daughter is dead.

"I have nothing to go on. I just feel she is still alive. I cannot give up hope until I have proof," Mrs. Jaeger said at her Farmington, Mich., home.

Mrs. Jaeger, 36, said she and her husband would like to return to Montana without the children and search for Susan, perhaps just by wandering through towns. "We just have to look for her. It's just something we have to do."

On June 16, 1973, the Jaegers set out on a camping trip which took them through several Western states.

They bedded down late on the night of June 24 at Headwaters State Monument, where three rivers meet to form the Missouri.

Susan and three other children slept in the tent. Their parents, another child and Mrs. Jaeger's parents slept in a camp trailer a few yards away.

About 4 a.m. one of the children awoke and discovered Susan was missing.

Police aided by tracking dogs and hundreds of volunteer searchers combed the hills and valleys for miles around, probed haystacks and searched ranch buildings.

A week after Susan vanished, the wife of a deputy sheriff in Three Forks received a phone call from a man who claimed to be holding Susan for ransom.

The amount of money wanted and a drop location in another state were given, but the caller did not give a time or date for the exchange.

The Jaegers issued a public plea to establish a new contact and attempted to raise the cash. Sources said the ransom figure was $50,000.

Mrs. Jaeger said that in September the family received a call from a man who identified Susan in the same manner as before.

"He said he had not completed plans for an exchange and we would be contacted again, maybe in a week or two or a month," she said. They waited but the promised call never came.

MOTHER... believes Susan is alive.

Brezhnev Wants Stable Relations, Report Says

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev says Russia wants really stable relations with America that are not dependent on temporary considerations, Pravda reported Sunday.

President Nixon arrives Thursday, and the Communist party newspaper appeared to be saying Watergate should not block a developing understanding between the two superpowers.

Pravda also quoted Sen. Edward Kennedy as saying Nixon and Brezhnev should talk without hesitation when there is a real basis for discussions.

This implicitly acknowledged opposition within the United States to a new round of negotiations with Russia at a time when Nixon's leadership in the United States was being questioned.

The commentary recalled that previous Nixon-Brezhnev summits had produced a charter of peaceful coexistence, an agreement on preventing nuclear war and an accord on limiting strategic arms.

In addition, Pravda said agreements on mutually beneficial cooperation in many fields were signed and are being implemented now.

Brezhnev said last week he expected good new agreements to emerge from the upcoming summit. Most frequently mentioned is a treaty extending the ban on nuclear testing to underground explosions. Tests in the air and under the sea are banned under a 1963 treaty.

A keynote Pravda commentary on the eve of Nixon's first visit here as President two years ago stressed that preparations had been going on for a long time, and using the familiar device of quoting a foreign source sketched out an agenda of probable agreements which was actually followed at the 1972 summit.

No such agenda was suggested in Pravda's commentary Sunday and there was no mention of the kind of careful preparation that preceded the 1972 meeting.

An advance party from the White House arrived in Moscow last Thursday, only a week before the President's arrival.

Soldier Faces Charge

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A 19-year-old British soldier was charged Sunday with murder in the shooting death of a civilian during a scuffle with soldiers.

A special civilian court in Londonderry, a mainly Roman Catholic town near the border with the Irish Republic, charged Alec John Fury, a trooper in the Life Guards, with killing Hugh Devine, 33. The court ordered Fury held by Army authorities.

The incident occurred shortly before midnight in Strabane, a border town south of Londonderry and 65 miles northwest of Belfast. The army said shortly after the incident that a rifle had "discharged accidentally," killing Devine.

No details of the incident were given in court.

The Northern Ireland Criminal Appeal Court recently overturned the manslaughter conviction and three-year prison sentence of another soldier, Cpl. Francis Foxford. He was sentenced for killing a 12-year-old boy while on duty.

Foxford's case received much publicity in England and its Irish province, and several lawmakers contended that the army was hampered unjustly if soldiers were open to civilian prosecutions.

Devine's death was one of three Saturday night in a new outbreak of violence in the embattled province. Authorities blamed the Catholic-based Irish Republican Army for the deaths of the other two victims, a police sergeant and a British soldier.

New York Times News Summary

Resolutions Rejected

San Diego — The nation's mayors, who are meeting here, rejected three Watergate-related resolutions and prevented a fight that they believed would have been bitter and divisive. Led by Mayor Kenneth A. Gibson of Newark, a Democrat, and Mayor Ralph J. Park of Cleveland, a Republican, the conference of mayors tabled the resolutions at a meeting of the conference's resolutions committee. The resolutions would have supported laws proposing to curb executive privilege and implied presidential powers, to require public financing of election campaigns, and to establish a strong election-finance reporting system.

AMA Convention Opens

Chicago — The American Medical Association began its 123rd annual convention here with its leadership hoping to prevent an open split in the medical profession over the issue of peer review, under which physicians examine the professional methods of their colleagues. The peer review program was mandated under federal law two years ago.

NASA To Fire Rockets

New York — A spectacular rocket barrage by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is scheduled to take place Monday above the East Coast, weather permitting, and will last for 24 hours beginning at 11:50 p.m. CDT. Fifty-four rockets will be fired from Wallops Island on the Virginia coast, and six will release chemicals that should make brilliant trails in the night sky, visible from Boston to Florida and as far inland as the Middle West. They will be launched to explore the "no-man's region" of the atmosphere that is too high for study with balloons and too low to be monitored by an Earth satellite.

Kissinger Attends Party

New York — Secretary of State Kissinger went alone to a large wedding party given for him and his wife, the former Nancy Maginnes, by Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Rockefeller at Pocantico Hills, the Rockefeller-family estate in Tarrytown, N.Y. His wife, whom he married nearly three months ago, is recuperating from a gastric ulcer at Bethesda Naval Hospital. The 350 guests came from across the country and were personal and political friends of the Rockefellers and the Kissingers.

Socialist Elected President

Vienna — The unbroken record of victories by socialist candidates in Austrian presidential elections since World War II was maintained with the election of Rudolph Kirchschlaeger, a lawyer and diplomat. Kirchschlaeger who has been his country's foreign minister since 1970, succeeds Franz Jonas, who died April 24. He is not a political party member, but he was the personal choice of Chancellor Bruno Kreisky as the nominee of the Socialist Party. He defeated Alois Lugger, the mayor of Innsbruck, who was the candidate of the conservative Austrian Peoples Party.

Police Discover Fire, Rescue 5 Children

Los Angeles (UPI) — Four police officers trying to rescue five young children trapped by fire formed a human chain in a flame-swept apartment house corridor Saturday night and passed the children through the smoke to safety.

One officer crawled on his stomach through 18 inches of breathable air in the smoke-filled hallway and handed the children one at a time to officers further down the hall and on an adjacent stairwell.

Patrolman Gerald D. Williams and three other officers were recommended Sunday for departmental heroism citations.

A handful of neighbors in the district near the Los Angeles coliseum formed the bottom end of the chain and handed the children one by one out the lower corridor and to the street.

The rescue occurred within a space of less than 15 minutes and the last child was being transferred out by the time the first fire department unit arrived with oxygen equipment to treat the victims until ambulances arrived.

There were six children and a 15-year-old babysitter in one room on the top floor of the two story wood and stucco building. The babysitter ran out with a one-year-old boy in her arms but the other five were trapped inside.

Williams, 29, who has two boys of his own, one 6 and the other 16 months, said he and his partner were cruising the area when they saw billows of black smoke rising.

Williams and his partner, Lawrence Skiba, sent an alarm which quickly brought another police car containing officers James R. Wilson and John A. Zrossky.

"We could hear children crying upstairs," Williams said. "The front stairwell was completely involved in flames so we got to the back where there is another stairwell leading up and went up the steps.

"The hallway was completely full of smoke and soot so we had to lay on the floor where there was breathable air. So we started crawling along and I first came across a little girl and I got her and handed her to Skiba who passed her down to the officers that were down on the stairs behind us.

"Then I came across a little boy. He was on fire so I lay on top of him and put the fire out and then I checked to make sure he was still breathing and passed him on down.

"I came on to two more little girls and when I got hold of them to pass them down the line their skin came off in my hands. Then I could hear crying inside a door so I lay on my back and kicked it in because the knob was too hot to grab and I pulled out this last little girl."

The seven children were identified as Darlene Dockery, 15; Evan Lewis, 1, his brother Michael, 2, and sister, Javon, 12; Anita Florence, 10, her sister, Andrea, 7, and their brother, Bobby, 6.

Asked whether he thought his action had been heroic, Williams said: "I don't know about that — all I care is that the children are safe," he said.

Swiss-French Minority Votes To Create New State

DELEMONT, Switzerland (AP) — The Jura region bordering France voted narrowly Sunday to set up a new canton, or state, within Switzerland through secession from the mainly German-speaking canton of Bern.

The vote was 36,802 to 34,057, officials said.

A big secessionist vote in three of the seven Jura districts decided the outcome in the plebiscite, designed to solve the multi-lingual country's most delicate minority problem.

Four other districts, including also mostly French speakers, came out against separation from Bern.

The vote was the first step in a series predicted to lead in about three years to the creation of a canton of Jura. It would be Switzerland's 23rd canton and the sixth with a French-language majority.

The turnout was close to 90 per cent after a short cut hectic campaign marred early Saturday by a shooting in which a youth was seriously wounded and a series of fistfights between opposing sides.

Tension over the language issue has flared again and again during the past 150 years.

Discreet prodding from the federal government helped bring about the plebiscite after radical secessionists had warned the dispute might turn the Jura into a "second Northern Ireland."

The problem dates back to the 1815 Congress of Vienna that reshaped the nations of Europe after Napoleon's defeat. It attached the Jura to Protestant Bern after almost 800 years of autonomy as a Vatican type principality ruled by Roman Catholic bishops.

The secessionist movement gained momentum after 1947 when a Jura official was barred from a top Bern government post because of his French language.

The stronghold of the separatist movement traditionally has been in the north of the region. Delemont, its headquarters, is rated certain to become the future canton's capital.

The canton's size and population will be determined after at least three more plebiscites.

The four districts of the 140,000-population Jura which favor continued attachment to Bern now have six months to seek a vote on their ultimate status inside or outside the new canton. The likely outcome is a split of the region, already divided by different religious affiliations.

The ultimate decision is to come from all Swiss voters — 80 per cent of them German speakers — because redrawing of state borders requires an amendment of the federal constitution.

75 Policemen Disperse Brawl

LIVONIA, Mich. (AP) — Mrs. Al Luiko said Sunday her daughter Sue invited about 100 friends to a high school graduation party. But about 500 came and it turned into a pre-dawn brawl involving police from seven different departments.

Five youths and one adult were arrested in the hour-long melee Saturday, which followed Friday night's graduation exercises at nearby Franklin High School.

Police were called in by Mrs. Luiko, who said the festivities were getting out of hand. Officers said they received complaints that laws were being trampled.

Livonia police were the first to arrive. They asked the crowd of teenagers to leave, but were answered with rocks, bottles, beer cans and firecrackers, officers said.

They called for help from neighboring departments and five responded, along with state police and a Wayne County helicopter, which kept its searchlight on the action. About 75 officers took part in the dispersal.

Some adults said police used unnecessary force.

"I've avoided trouble for 47 years, but sometime you've got to stand up," said Paul Winkler, 47, a salesman who was charged with disorderly conduct and interference with arrest.

Allen Hicks, 43, whose son attended the party, said he has filed a formal complaint charging the Livonia police with using excessive force.

Police said they would have a statement on the allegations Monday.

Winkler was attending a party for adults across the street, and said he entered the battle when he witnessed police beating a youth. "The next thing I knew I was face-down on the hood of a car with a night sticks across my neck and an elbow in my back."

Winkler's son, Phil, 18, said he had to use half of his $100 graduation present to bail his father out of jail.

By LOUIS HARRIS
By 57 to 36%, a majority of the American people favors televising nationally the impeachment proceedings in the House of Representatives. By an even larger 59 to 34%, a majority also would favor putting a U.S. Senate trial of the President on TV.

Asked to choose between specific arguments in favor of televising everything from the proceedings of the House Judiciary Committee up to and including a possible trial of the President in the Senate as against the fears expressed over creating a public spectacle, decisive majorities come down every time on the side of the camera eye.

Earlier this month, a nationwide cross section of 1,413 households in which interviews were conducted in person was asked this question: "Do you think the impeachment proceedings in the House of Representatives should be televised nationally or not?"

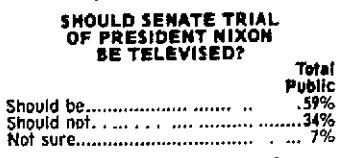

Traditionally, the House has always prohibited televising either its committee or full House proceedings. At first, the Judiciary Committee indicated that it planned to open its hearings to television, a decision later reversed. The issue, however, is still being debated by members of the House and a vote to open up the Judiciary Committee investigation and a possible later debate on the House floor could well be in the offing.

In the case of the U.S. Senate, majority leader Sen. Mike

Mansfield has already indicated that if a trial is held there after House impeachment of President Nixon, he would favor that it be before the television cameras.

The cross section was then asked: "If the President is impeached by the House of Representatives and he is put on trial by the U.S. Senate, do you think the trial in the Senate should be televised nationally or not?"

Clear majorities favor televising both the House impeachment proceedings and the ultimate Senate trial, if it takes place.

The public feels strongly about getting to see the impeachment process at work. They believe that television is the most direct means for them to know what is going on. The biggest single group favoring televising the proceedings, coming to one in every four persons, volunteers as their reason the people's "right to know." As a farmer in Jasper County, Iowa, put it, "We've got a right to know what's going on there in Washington, and on TV we ought to be able to see it all."

Another key reason volunteered in support of televising the impeachment proceedings was the desire to "see things for myself," without any filtering through media interpretations.

This implies some public skepticism about the way electronic and print media report the news. As a businessman in Rochester, N.Y., said, "I'd like to get it like it happens, without all the commentary and the shadings in the papers or on TV or radio."

Opposition to televising the impeachment or trial tended to be rather diffuse, with people raising such reservations as: (1) "we have seen too much of Watergate already," (2) "the proceedings should be kept private to only those involved," (3) "it might undermine the office of the presidency," (4) "the people can read all about it in the newspaper if they want to," (5) "it would be cruel to President Nixon," or (6) "it might turn the proceedings into a sideshow." But none of these reasons was volunteered by more than 8 per cent of the public.

Finally, basic propositions for and against televising the impeachment proceedings were put directly to the cross section: "Let me read you some statements some people have made about televising the hearings of the House Judiciary Committee and an impeachment trial of the President by the full U.S. Senate. For each, tell me if you agree or disagree. (READ STATEMENTS)"

Arguments over televising impeachment	Disagree	Not sure
Pro-Televising: They should be televised because the American people have a right to know all the facts about this highly important event in American history.	67%	28%
Anti-Televising: The public can't judge if Congress is doing the right thing on impeachment unless the people are allowed to see it all.	58%	34%
Pro-Televising: No proper judicial trial can be held fairly under the glare of television lights and cameras.	35%	53%
Anti-Televising: The possible impeachment and conviction of a President is too serious a business to turn into a television spectacular, so it should not be televised.	33%	59%

In each case, a solid majority clearly opts for televising the impeachment process in either the House or, if it gets there, the Senate. Basically, the people are trying to say that it is not idle curiosity which leads them to want to see the impeachment proceedings, but rather a deep involvement, themselves, in the process and a desire to see that justice is meted out to all concerned. Televising the proceedings, in the judgment of a majority, is a way to insure this fairness, not to impede it.

WAKE ME IN ABOUT 14 SECONDS---THE COFFEE'S NOT QUITE DONE YET---

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplaine

Some talk about starting a fox hunting club around our social suburbs. Fox hunting came originally from England. Still does. It is not only noble, it is social as all get out.

It comes up in our suburban community from time to time. It's usually brought up by slim ladies, who look awfully good in riding pants. And other ladies, peeling off the calories, say: "Well, well. They WOULD want to wear something like that?"

So far our hunting is frontier fashion. Saw a couple of neighbors go by the other day, armed to the teeth. Can't be deer season. Too early for ducks. Must be doves.

Anyway, it's a noble thing. Nobly pumping $1.3 billion into the national spending. For guns and bullets. Tents and camp stoves. On red caps and red shirts — so other hunters will not mistake them for a deer and blooie!

Study Sees Credit Bias

Washington (AP) — A nearly completed Civil Rights Commission study of bias in home mortgage lending practices shows that "women as a class have been notoriously discriminated against in credit transactions," commission Chairman Arthur S. Flemming told the House banking subcommittee on consumer affairs

The subcommittee is considering a bill to ban credit bias based on group identifications of individuals by sex, race or marital status.

Flemming said despite the fact that 43 per cent of all married women with children under 18 are working, the mortgage lenders often discount a working woman's income automatically when considering a mortgage to the family.

Women as heads of households also have what he called enormous difficulties in getting mortgage money.

There's still a lot of fox hunting around England. And there is a League Against Cruel Sports whose members do everything they can to break it up.

League members follow the hunt. When the fox goes to earth — that is jumps in the fox hole — the member jumps in with him.

When the huntsmen ride up, the League member has draped the fox with the Union Jack. He defies the hunters to do their worst.

This is raising hob with fox hunting in England. But it's part of the British spirit.

If we are going to have hunting in our suburbs, I suppose we'd better organize a League to prevent it, too.

You cannot beat fox hunting for pictures on the society pages. And if you could get color! With all those pink coats.

You have hounds and a Hunt Ball. All things that make life really worthwhile.

There's one problem. We don't have foxes around here.

Coyotes maybe. But you can't have a coyote hunt and get any space except in the comic strips. It seems foxes can be imported. They did this some place in Minnesota. It was a rousing success for everybody. Except the fox.

It doesn't seem fair to bring in a strange fox and hunt him. Before he's had a chance to learn his way to the supermarket.

The imported foxes are of very good background. Good families. The right clubs.

There's quite a bit in the etiquette books on fox hunting — something to keep in mind if you're organizing a hunt club in YOUR suburbs.

"Riders should keep a sharp lookout for the hunted fox. A novice who views the fox takes off his hat and holds it straight out, with a straight arm pointing at the animal.

"A proper 'View Holloa' is better left to experts. He must be sure however, that a member of the hunt staff has noticed the signal. He may be the only one to see the fox, and so be able greatly to improve the day's sport."

So that seems simple enough. You need a horse. You need a pink coat. A straight arm and 20-20 vision. (Corrections acceptable, but it must be noted on your fox hunting license.)

You also need a cooperative fox

With all these things, there's no reason we can't all have a hunt club. Hunting foxes in the stylish manner.

Read the etiquette book so we don't make a faux pas at the fox hunt. The fox would die of shame.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Monday

Aries who surprised me with his knowledge of literature. George Jessel, Aries who delighted me with her support of astrology. Delta Davis, Taurus who showed me he had an ironic sense of humor. Joe Louis, Taurus whose interest in astrology and allied subjects never wavers. Glenn Ford, Cancer who won me with flattery. Della Reese, Aquarius who did the same thing. Phyllis McGuire, Dilemma. Novak, these are some of my Zodiac People. How do you like them?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Elusiveness is featured. Persons who should be "available" are apt to do a disappearing act. Be ready to utilize alternatives. Delays are on agenda but could boomerang in your favor. Obviously, patience now is an ally.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Money figures prove negative in special relationship. Organize. Get priorities in order. Accent is on change and creativity. Mate or partner may exhibit expensive tastes. Stand fast for principles and quality.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't be in too much of a hurry to close deal, especially where real estate, land enter picture. Review documents. Legal loopholes could be present. Protect yourself! Sweet-talk is fine but get assurances in black and white.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New contacts, challenges could leave you a bit uneasy. This is only temporary, confidence will build. Accept challenge, be flexible. Leo, Aquarius persons may be in picture. Relative delivers important message — in person or by telephone.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are able to put together material which results in gainful, intuitive, intellect plays paramount role. Follow through on hunch. Aquarius is in picture. Romantic notions may not be based on anything solid. Give love a chance to operate!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Cycle is such that emotional burden is removed. You experience greater freedom of thought, action. Horizons expand. Travel opportunity presents itself. You have more fun than in recent past. Sagittarius might be involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What you feared is brought out in open — and you benefit. Check details. Build on solid base. Be grateful that way is cleared for advancement. Express gratitude to those who have been loyal. Closed-door meeting may be on agenda.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are able to fulfill major ambition. Key is willingness to accept change, to analyze, to detect subtle nuances. Friend is in picture and emotional fulfillment is featured. Material gain will catch up — know it and don't despair.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Glamor, romantic notions, relationships (husband) are highlighted. Nothing is apt to occur halfway, it's all or nothing. Know it and prepare accordingly. Taurus, Libra persons are involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Time now to organize. Responsibilities no longer can be ignored. Experience and challenge combine to provide stimulation. Accent is on cashing in, getting an accounting, taking inventory. Become familiar with stock and values.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Finish old business — strive to reach more persons. Pace slows and you have a chance to re-establish contacts. Give attention to person who aids, means much to you. You will get chance to advance. Key is to know how to let go of losing proposition.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have fine voice, sense of drama. You are artistic, restless, loyal to family, affectionate and have a sweet tooth. Diet is important — is current domestic situation, which is due to be adjusted. Change of residence or remodeling has been discussed and comes to a head in September.

Taurus, Libra persons play significant roles in your life. Party For Eggheads Like Any Other Bash

(c) Chicago Daily News

Chicago — What's it like at a party for eggheads? The answer: no different from any other bash.

About 100 members of Mensa proved it at a party prior to the opening of their annual three-day meeting here Friday.

Mensa is a nationwide group of persons scoring in the top two per cent on I.Q. tests. In short, a brainy bunch.

But the partygoers who jammed into one egghead's apartment resembled any ordinary social gathering, aside from a noticeably greater age range.

There were young and old men and women, some too flashy and others too quiet. They helped themselves to drinks and chatted across tables laden with hors d'oeuvres and lasagna. Bookcases stuffed with books made an appropriate surrounding.

Conversations were colorful or prosaic.

A blond-executive secretary sat pensively on a couch, gazing thoughtfully at fellow guests.

"A lot of people think we in Mensa are weird," she said. "But we're just like everybody else. At a party, we talk about the same things as other people at parties."

Grandma Finds a Gold Mine—in Plates!

NORTHBROOK, Ill. — A successful art dealer in this Chicago suburb has announced a new, easy way to start collecting rare porcelain plates with high resale potential.

According to Thomas Gilmore II, president of this dealership, one grandmother of modest means bought one exceptional plate for $25 in 1965 that now sells for $1,050, and purchased another at $10 in 1969 that now brings $245.

Mr. Gilmore says, "Since many plates do not increase in value, amateurs often make serious mistakes." He offers a free report telling what to look for, what to pay, when to sell, and much more.

To get your free report with no obligation, just send your name, address, and zip code to Thomas Gilmore, Bradford Galleries, 378Z Bradford Place, Northbrook, Illinois 60062. A postcard will do. Because of limited quantities, please mail your request by July 6, 1974.

Guess What, You're Fired

Dean S. McDermott was fired as director of rehabilitation services for the blind May 16 by Dr. Jack Anderson, director of the State Department of Public Institutions. McDermott is very confused by all this, and we don't blame him a bit.

When McDermott went before the State Personnel Board last week to seek reinstatement of his job, and was asked by the board why he should be reinstated, he was at a loss for an answer. He could not refute any specific charges offered by Anderson concerning the conduct of his job because there were none.

McDermott said the reasons given by Anderson were general grounds for dismissal taken from the State Personnel Manual and that Anderson offered no detailed instances of misconduct to back them up. McDermott says he still does not know why Dr. Anderson fired him.

As questionable as the grounds for dismissal are, the conditions under which McDermott was fired are worse.

McDermott said he had no idea he would be fired until the day it happened, May 16, when Dr. Anderson called him into his office, handed him a letter saying he was terminated immediately and introduced him to his successor, James S. Nyman of San Antonio, Tex., who was present. McDermott was packed up and out of his office in an hour, although he remained on the state payroll until May 30.

We are not commenting on McDermott's fitness for the position as compared to Nyman's. We are as much in the dark as to the grounds for McDermott's dismissal as McDermott claims to be.

We do object, however, to the high-handed manner in which the director of public institutions fires one of his employees on the spot, in the presence of a previously-chosen successor, without giving the employee any specific reasons for his dismissal.

McDermott, who had been director of rehabilitation services for the blind for almost five years and a counselor for over five years, commented on his dismissal: "This could happen to any one of the state's 25,000 employees. Nobody has any security in a system where somebody says, 'I don't like you, you're fired.'"

We agree with a department head's right to change personnel should conditions warrant it, but we think he should have some good reasons in mind and should not carry it off in the impulsive and thoughtless manner as exhibited by Dr. Anderson.

Gov. Exon should advise Anderson, specifically, and any other department heads who tend to act similarly, that the morale of state employees would be much better if such instances did not occur.

An Afrikaner Looks At Lincoln

A gentleman from the South African information agency, bent on burnishing Americans' image of his nation, visited the editorial offices of the Lincoln newspapers last week on the first day of the end-of-spring heat wave.

He said he had been with the information agency in New York for about a year and a half. Thus he had seen his first snowfall and several thereafter and he doesn't want to see any more snow. We told him that snowfall on the mountain tops out west or the first snow of the season across our Nebraska prairies could be a beautiful sight.

Then he said, mopping his brow, that he had never seen such weather as had greeted him in Lincoln, and he'd been visiting through most of the plains and the east and south. The heat PLUS the humidity, the bane of Nebraska weather, had claimed another victim.

But the episode says something about misconceptions and the changeability of Nebraska weather:

—We thought of South Africa as a place of hot, steamy jungles, but he said the heat is nothing as compared to here.

—He should have stayed for the weekend.

Washington — Six weeks away from Watergate seem to have made no difference at all. Like Old Man River, it just keeps rolling along. Like a river, too, it keeps eating away at its own banks until it appears as if everyone and everything in the vicinity may ultimately be engulfed. Has any episode ever so glaringly disclosed the corrupting nature of power and the tendency towards mass ethical blindness at the heart of modern institutional life?

The latest example is that of Henry Petersen, the Justice Department career professional who once had an enviable reputation for incorruptibility and non-partisanship. His supervision of the early Watergate investigation has, at the least, raised questions about his conduct.

By his own admissions to the Senate Judiciary Committee last week, Petersen oversaw an investigation that was "snookered" by untruthful or secretive witnesses from the White House and the Committee to Re-Elect the President; and he did not push his own suspicions of high administration involvement — suspicions of which, in fact, he was "ashamed."

KISSINGER

Petersen also sought to make more of a distinction than others are likely to see between treating political figures "gently" and treating them "with restraint." After all, the net effect of the "restraint" with which Petersen and Earl J. Silbert conducted the original Watergate investigation was that their inquiry never got past the tip of the iceberg. Yet, when Sen. Sam Ervin and other members of the Senate Judiciary Committee raised questions about these matters, Petersen erupted in anger.

"This is a terrible, terrible thing," he shouted at Ervin. "Do us justice, will you?"

The justice Petersen seems to want is not to be questioned at all about his supervision of the Watergate investigation. To him, it is an unjustifiable questioning of his integrity to ask, for example, why he allowed Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans to give a deposition rather than testify before a grand jury that could cross-examine Stans.

☆☆☆ Petersen's reaction was reminiscent of that of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger when the latter returned from his Middle East triumphs to find himself under renewed questioning about his part in the wiretapping of 17 officials and newspaper reporters during the first Nixon administration.

Kissinger, too, reacted angrily; ultimately, in his remarkable Salzburg news conference, he demanded, in effect, that the questioning stop and that he be cleared of the charges, on pain of his resignation.

In Kissinger's case, this may not have been quite the tactical error at first supposed, nor even the reaction of a man exhausted to the point of losing his good judgment. Henry Kissinger happens to be about the shrewdest manipulator of the press ever to get himself quoted as a "senior official" telling the public what he wants it to know.

PETERSEN

The major effect of his Salzburg performance was to get the United States Senate virtually on record that he was an honest man who ought not to be questioned by the blood-thirsty press. Kissinger also created considerable public sympathy for himself, and shifted the focus of the controversy. Now the question is not so much whether he did anything he shouldn't have, but whether the press should have raised such embarrassing questions about a man who was busily creating a generation of peace.

☆☆☆ Petersen probably will not succeed so well. Ervin and the Senate committee are not as good targets as the press;

Petersen's anguish was a little shrill by comparison to Kissinger's beautifully measured sorrow; and Petersen has not been bringing us a generation of peace, if anyone has.

It is surely to be hoped that the Ervin hearings on the Silbert nomination — which is to say on the early Watergate investigation — and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's inquiry into the Kissinger wiretap charges will result in the exoneration of both Petersen and the secretary of state.

Too many once respected officials already have been shown to have succumbed to the lust for power or the need to go along with their peers and superiors; more defendants would be a drug on the market but the nation could certainly use a few examples of men who defied the pressures of power and conformity.

But neither Petersen nor anyone else is likely to prove himself such a man by banging on tables and denouncing those who inquire into his conduct. In the long-run, that conduct will speak for itself, and louder than anyone can shout.

By CAROL BROMAN
President, Near South Neighborhood Association
Lincoln, Neb.

Since January, 1968, there have been approximately 400 requests to change the zoning map of the City of Lincoln. The following summarizes the action taken on these requests:

Rezoning to more intense use ("upzoning") — Planning staff approved 125; Planning Commission approved 156; City Council approved 208; mayor vetoed 17.

Rezoning to less intense use ("down" or "de-zoning") — Planning staff approved 10; Planning Commission approved five; City Council approved six, mayor vetoed one.

Each of these zone changes represents a departure from the land use map in the Comprehensive Plan of 1961. Now we are told by Mayor Schwartzkopf that the zone change request for the area between 24th and 26th Streets on Sumner Street "appears to be far from proper" and therefore "legally questionable" because it is a change from the current Comprehensive Plan land use map. He has vetoed only 17 of the 208 zone changes approved by the Council since 1968 and all of these must be at least as "legally questionable" as the decision on Sumner Street in terms of their relationship to the current land use plan.

☆☆☆ The mayor also questioned the request as being "devoid for the most part of any sound planning or public health, safety and welfare considerations." Health, safety and welfare considerations are necessary in all rezoning decisions, not merely those that change zoning to more restrictive uses. It is quite amazing that this question was not raised in those 190 zone changes that the mayor approved.

The Near South Neighborhood Association earnestly believes that this zone change is necessary to preserve the health, safety and welfare of the residents of this area. Over 340 residents supported this feeling with their petition signatures. They agree that extension of business uses and multiple dwellings in this area does endanger their safety and welfare by causing grave traffic problems and removing valuable open space.

They are also concerned about the present deterioration that results from non-resident property owners who hold this land for speculative purposes.

☆☆☆ Since this zone change could not be made without the approval of the consultants updating the Comprehensive Plan, we will assume that no zone change will be made without their approval and therefore that all zone change requests approved by the Council before the new Comprehensive Plan is adopted will be vetoed.

The Near South Neighborhood Association has as its primary concern the preservation of a valuable older neighborhood. This zone change request was considered to be one step in the fulfillment of this goal. Those in the association who devoted many hours over a three-month period to doing research on the request and to informing the neighborhood and public officials about it feel truly frustrated and disappointed.

Some of the encouragement we felt when four councilpersons approved our request is lost with the mayor's veto of it. We will continue to work to conserve this neighborhood, but unless we have support on issues like "down-zoning", there is reason to question our chance for success.

KEVIN P. PHILLIPS

Modern Metternich

WASHINGTON — Judging by some of the documents floating around Washington, it may be true that Henry Kissinger fibbed to the Senate about his role in wiretapping subordinates suspected of possible national security leaks. But even if that proves to be the case, my own response is: So what?

Then and now, Secretary Kissinger was America's foremost diplomat, and diplomats must do many things that they pretend not to do. We can safely assume that since World War Two, dozens of senior U.S. diplomats and officials have found it necessary to stretch the truth in giving routine methodological assurances to congressional committees.

If Henry Kissinger is in trouble today, it's because of the Watergate reign of terror. Previously, liberals chose to ignore the fact that his background suggested security-consciousness. But all three of Kissinger's great heroes — Austria's 19th Century Prince Metternich, Germany's von Bismarck and France's Charles de Gaulle — relied heavily on domestic surveillance and espionage techniques to backstop their "Grand Game" of international diplomacy.

☆☆☆ In policy terms, at least, Henry Kissinger is widely recognized as a product of the Metternich-Bismarck-de Gaulle realpolitik tradition. Why should we be surprised that Kissinger has also used surveillance and wiretap techniques? However, even his worst enemies can't point to more than minor episodes — absolutely inconsequential in comparison with Prussian, Austrian and French practices.

When you think about it, America has expected Henry Kissinger to be a 20th Century Metternich — which to some extent he has been — while encumbering him with legislative witch-hunters, powerful newspapers thrilled to print stolen classified documents, and a New York-Washington cocktail circuit that makes heroes out of Daniel Ellsberg, Alger Hiss and company. It's amazing that Kissinger's secret diplomacy has done so well for so long.

Prince Metternich would be astonished at Kissinger's forbearance. From the 1815 Congress of Vienna until the middle of the century, Metternich scored his great international coups — mediating here, negotiating there — while maintaining a virtual police state at home.

Among the great failings of today's Watergate climate is a lack of historical context. Media and congressional Robespierres, in trying to destroy Henry Kissinger are ignoring not only national security needs but the precedents of secret diplomacy. Similarly, the Nixon administration is being attacked for political practices — outside of Watergate — that have been standard for years. Can anybody who remembers FDR's political use of the WPA, Robert Kennedy's wiretaps or LBJ's cronies possibly believe that these things begin with Richard Nixon?

In Mr. Jefferson's Day

Holdrege, Neb.

As the Fourth of July approaches, we remember, and I offer some of these thoughts. Because I am an ardent student of graphology, I was greatly interested in the analysis of the signatures on the Declaration of Independence.

Thomas Jefferson, foe of tyranny, was the father of the United States Day of Independence. Perhaps few Americans remember that July 2 was the day on which the Continental Congress first adopted a resolution that "these United Colonies are, and of a right, ought to be free and independent states."

These ideas were written into a formal declaration dated July 4, 1776. The author of the immortal and stirring proclamation was an obscure, 33-year-old congressman with fiery red hair and a flaming devotion to liberty, Thomas Jefferson. Jefferson lived in a time of trouble, just as we do today, but he spoke out fearlessly.

Many of the more conservative statesmen considered Jefferson a dangerous young radical. Often their arguments created an atmosphere that was too warm for comfort. On one such occasion, Jefferson suggested that they pray. Rising from their knees, a special committee designated him to put his ideas into a formal declaration. This was done. A few of his most incendiary statements, some containing uncomplimentary references to the King and the English people, also the slave trade, were deleted, but all in all, it was Jefferson's language.

Four days later, the famous Liberty Bell pealed the entire day atop Independence Hall, summoning Philadelphians to a public reading of that famous writing. The bell was cracked in 1835, and rings no more. But its message of liberty still rings in the hearts and minds of all true Americans throughout the land unto all peoples.

The Declaration of Independence with the Constitution of the United States enshrined for all time rests in an hermetically sealed glass show-case in the Library of Congress on Capitol Hill, safe from the ravages of time.

Perhaps most notable of Jefferson's sayings was: "I have sworn upon the altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the minds of men."

Equality Under The Law

Fremont, Neb.

A week or so ago an article appeared in the Fremont Tribune in support of tips for waitresses. I disagree with that article. Instead I believe the law on equality should be enforced; then tips would not be necessary. If the tippers sincerely believe in tipping for the reasons stated in the article, I wonder what kind of tips they receive for the same reasons?

If the minimum wage law means anything at all, why does it discriminate against restaurant and farm employees — employees who work the hardest but receive the least in wages? If it means raising the prices of meals, etc., then so be it. Isn't that the way other businesses and professions manage?

Whoever dreamed up the silly idea of tipping waitresses, anyway? In politics I believe they call it bribery. What about other employees — custodians, dish-washers, cooks, etc.? Clerks in clothing and grocery stores and professional offices receive no tips. The law of this land, the Constitution, when enforced guarantees equality for all its citizens, thereby doing away with second, third, fourth and fifth-class citizens.

BERNIE A. JOHNSON

ON TARGET

By DON WALTON

This is the week Nebraska Democrats and Nebraska Republicans must decide what they're all about.

Both will hold their state conventions this weekend, the GOP in Lincoln, the Democrats in Norfolk.

And each must write a party platform. Let us watch and see what they say.

A party which produces a vapid document filled with expressed support for all the virtues is likely to be a vapid party.

A party which takes positions on the tough issues (or, at least tries to, although it may fail to gain consensus) is likely to be a vibrant party.

Yes, Republicans and Democrats, we all know you favor economy in government, a fair tax system, economic development, highway improvement, quality education at all levels, job opportunities and private initiative.

But what are you going to do about it? And what specific legislation would you like to see enacted (or repealed) to reach those goals? How much tax money are you willing to spend to implement those goals? Where would you cut back?

What is a fair tax system? And what is your position, specifically, on LB772 the state school aid bill?

Those are the questions that the governor and all 49 members of the Legislature have to face. Senators gotta vote yes or no (or hide in the bathroom), and once they have decided, the governor has to sign or veto or throw up his hands and let the bill become law without his signature.

Senators and the governor have to propose and support and oppose and amend or seek to amend.

In a system which features a non-partisan Legislature, the parties are often spectators.

If they want to be more, specific proposals are in order this week.

Why not more than three?

Governor Exon and Senator Marvel have been trading proposals on how to conduct the "debates" which each of them has agreed to participate in during the coming gubernatorial election campaign.

They seem to have agreed on one thing — three debates. I'd like to see more.

Whether they actually take the form of "debates" or not, I think joint appearances by Exon and Marvel (and Senator Chambers too, assuming he gains entry to the general election ballot by petition) throughout the state would be in the public interest.

In 1966, Phil Sorensen and Nobby Tiemann conducted what may have been the most instructive gubernatorial campaign in memory when they participated in a whole host of debates and joint appearances across Nebraska.

By the time they were finished, it was clear that there wasn't much difference between the two candidates on major issues. But the few differences were clearly delineated.

In 1970, Exon and Tiemann got together on a number of occasions, and the voters came out with a clearer idea of their differences in philosophy and personality. Those "debates" became somewhat personal, spiced with acid.

Now, in 1974, we have an incumbent governor who has been in office for nearly four years and a veteran legislator who has been in office for nearly 20 years and who has directed the legislative budget process for more than a decade.

Both should have some very clearly defined ideas on all state issues. And both have a record to exalt or defend.

Let the voters hear them out in Scottsbluff and Kearney and McCook and Grand Island and Norfolk and Lincoln and Omaha — and maybe in Bloomfield, too.

Obviously, they can't go everywhere in person. But educational television can take them there.

And there will be a sponsoring group waiting in every major community to provide them with facilities for joint appearances, including questions from the audience, from the voters themselves.

Each man must be allowed to conduct his own campaign, arrange his schedule to take him where he thinks he needs to go at the time he needs to be there, walking the streets alone, appearing before a group of partisan supporters, seeking votes on his own.

But, in the midst of that schedule, there should be opportunities here and there for joint appearances in most if not all areas of the state.

Voters should have an opportunity to judge the candidates together, to size them up, to compare and balance, to question them, to hear them question one another, to listen and watch and study and decide.

How about giving them more than three opportunities, gentlemen?

Missile Agreements Not Secret, But Congress Not Informed

©The New York Times

Washington — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger made no secret arrangements with Soviet leaders about the missile-limitation agreement of 1972, but he also did not inform Congress of several aspects of it that may have led to confusion over the agreements, according to high administration officials.

These officials, giving their version of the controversy Sunday, said that the story of the negotiations on the agreement was more complicated than originally reported.

They said that the controversy evolved from a misunderstanding over what appeared to be an ambiguity in one of the protocols to the agreement and from a "prediction" Kissinger had made about the number of U.S. missile launchers aboard submarines.

The New York Times, in an article printed Saturday, quoted administration sources as having said that Kissinger had reached two secret arrangements with Soviet leaders regarding the agreement, which limits the number of offensive nuclear missile launchers the United States and the Soviet Union can have.

According to the sources quoted in the article, Kissinger had given private assurances to Soviet officials that the United States did not intend to build the maximum number of submarine missile launchers permitted. At the same time, the article said, he agreed that the Russians, by modernizing old submarines, could exceed their limit on the number of missile launchers. The article said that Congress had not been informed of either arrangement.

Yesterday Kissinger issued a statement flatly denying that he had made any secret agreements with the Soviet Union. The secretary, associates said, will hold a news conference tomorrow and will appear before a subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee to answer questions on the subject.

Before publication of the Times article, efforts were made to contact qualified officials close to the Secretary. These officials, however, did not return telephone calls or refused to discuss the subject.

The interim agreement on offensive missiles was signed in Moscow in May, 1972, by President Nixon and the Soviet Communist Party leader, Leonid I. Brezhnev; it expires in 1977. A treaty that restricted defensive missile systems was signed at the same time.

By the published terms of the agreement on offensive weapons, Moscow was to be allowed to retire 210 of its older missile launchers if it chose to build up to a total of 950 modern submarine missile launchers. The placing of 70 modern launchers in older diesel-powered submarines was said to count within the 950.

But, according to administration sources interviewed last week, Kissinger reached an agreement with Soviet leaders after the agreement was sent to Congress. This understanding was said to have allowed Moscow to add the 70 modern launchers without counting them among the 950, giving a total of 1,020.

High administration officials said Sunday, however, that Kissinger and the Soviet leaders were always clear in their understanding that the total of 950 included the 70 modernized launchers. The difficulty, they said, came from staff experts on both sides.

These experts, the officials said, believed that the protocol explaining that part of the agreement was ambiguous, and could be read to permit either 950 or 1,020 launchers.

Kissinger, following up the concern of the experts, met with the Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin in mid-June, 1972. These two men agreed that the total should be 950, but apparently did not convey their agreement to the staffs, the officials said.

Thus, when the two staffs met a year later, the Soviet delegation informed the American delegation that their understanding was that Moscow would be allowed 1,020 submarine launchers, the officials said. This was conveyed to Kissinger, who again made contact with Soviet leaders and again affirmed their understanding of a 950 total, the officials said.

According to the high administration officials, the matter is now fully settled, with the Soviet Union accepting the 950 total as including modernization of older launchers.

Another provision of the agreement permitted the United States to increase its submarine missile launchers from 656 to 710 if it retired 54 old land-based launchers. According to qualified sources interviewed last week, Kissinger gave unilateral assurances to Soviet leaders the United States would not exercise this option and would remain at the 656 level.

Administration officials acknowledged Sunday that Kissinger had made this statement to Soviet leaders, but as a "prediction" rather than an "assurance." They said that there was no U.S. intention to retire the 54 older Titan land-based missiles. Since the United States had already announced its intention of developing the new Trident submarine, this meant that the 710 could not be reached anyway by 1977, when the agreement expires, the officials said.

These officials said that no one in the administration was arguing that the two matters — the ambiguity about Soviet launchers or the prediction about American missile strength — was of military significance. They do concede, however, that Congress had not been informed of them at the time it was considering the agreement, or when it gave its approval.

SUPERBEAR . . . took three hours to capture.

Wandering Bear Resists Captors

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP) — Look! Up in the tree. It's a bird. It's a squirrel. It's Superbear!

Faster than a panting policeman. Able to leap fences at a single bound. More powerful than a tranquilizer dose that should flatten a horse.

The weekend calm of the plush Isle of Sicily neighborhood was interrupted for three hours Saturday while police, Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission officers and zoo officials corralled a 300-pound black bear that wandered in from parts unknown.

David Booth, 12, of this island community in Lake Maitland, said his Irish setter, Liz, gave the first alarm. David said the dog had been barking since 7:30 a.m., and his sister and brother tried unsuccessfully to quiet her. About 10, David tried.

"I went out and she was barking and looking up into this tree, and I looked up and there was this bear," he said. "It had been right over my brother's and sister's heads, but they hadn't looked up."

He called police. Officers at first wanted to shoot the bear, but residents protested so game officers and officials from the Central Florida Zoo were called in.

Zoo animal expert Stan Brock came loaded for bear with a gun that shot tranquilizer darts.

"We had never used this particular drug on a bear before, and we figured he would go under — 10 minutes at the most," Brock said.

He fired his first dart while the bear was in the tree and sat back to wait until it fell asleep. Ten minutes later, the bear looked as wide awake as ever, so Brock shot him with two more darts.

That may have been a mistake.

"Hey, he's coming down," a policeman shouted as the bear jumped from the tree, leaped over a fence and ran with a posse in pursuit.

At the edge of the lake, he collapsed into a boat where officers got some ropes around him, but he shook the ropes loose, sloshed into the water and waded back to shore.

Brock fired a fourth dart at him, and the drug took effect. Police tied the bear up and got him into a cage.

Solo Traveler Rescued At Sea

TOKYO (AP) — A man attempting a solo crossing of the Pacific on a raft made of empty oil drums was rescued by a fishing boat Sunday after he became ill about one-fifth of the way to San Francisco.

The Maritime Safety Agency said the boat spotted the raft in rough seas about 932 miles east of Tokyo and rescued Kentaro Kaneko, 37, who has been suffering from kidney trouble. His condition was satisfactory, officials said.

They said Kaneko had been sending distress signals since Saturday. He left Tateyama, southeast of Tokyo, on April 27.

Philippine Moslems Rebel; 43 Die

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Forty-three persons were reported dead and at least 17 missing Sunday in an upsurge of antigovernment violence by Moslem rebels in the southern island of Mindanao.

The Philippine armed forces called in artillery and F86 jet fighters to quell a threat to the airport eight miles south of Cotabato City, a provincial capital in central Mindanao. At least 17 civilians were reported missing in fighting around Sulon, north of the airport.

Islamic foreign ministers sent to the Philippines last year to study the Moslem insurgency.

He urged his Moslem colleagues to call on Marcos's government to start negotiations with insurgent leaders "to reach a settlement and avoid bloodshed."

Adam Malik of Indonesia, probably the Philippines' best friend at the conference, spoke after the Libyan foreign minister and said Marcos is taking steps to "integrate the Moslems to assume their rightful place in society."

There are an estimated 3 1/2 million to 4 million Moslems and other non-Christians among the 8 million people of Mindanao, the second largest Philippine island. Most of the others are Roman Catholics. Moslems and Christian settlers have been fighting for years, and large-scale battles began between Moslem insurgents and government forces after Marcos declared martial law in September 1972.

In the latest fighting, leaders of five refugee families told the Philippine Red Cross they had counted 31 bodies of slain Christian evacuees during a 10-day trek to Cotabato from their community 40 miles to the south.

Provincial sources reported 12 residents dead in a barrio in Makilala, 55 miles east of Cotabato City. A mixed force of Moslem, Christian and pagan Bilaan tribesmen were blamed for the attack.

Stark Contrasts Seen During Tour

Omaha — The 47 persons on the eleventh annual Nebraskaland Tour Sunday met a traveling companion called "contrast."

Contrast joined the tour as a stranger and no one would pretend to know or understand the varying views of life offered in his name.

The tour took its participants through an Indian reservation outside South Sioux City and later to Omaha's Boys Town.

Contrast: The stark existence of Winnebago and Omaha Indians on their reservation in Thurston and Cuming Counties vs. an afternoon jaunt to the manicured lawns and solid structures of Boys Town.

Contrast: The unheralded toil of Msgr. Frank Hulsman of St. Augustine's Indian Mission near Winnebago vs. the world-renowned success of Father Edward Flannigan's Boys Town.

Contrast: The tired sameness and much-used appearance of federal Indian housing in Macy and Winnebago vs. the varied architecture and obvious maintenance of the wealthy 1,700-acre facility for troubled boys.

Contrast: Indian children playing in an abandoned automobile behind a used car lot in Macy vs. game fields and a field house for organized sports at Boys Town.

Contrast: Plastic flowers to decorate an Indian's home — almost a camouflage of life's realities — vs. the real flowers surrounding the statue at the entrance of Boys Town.

Contrast: An elderly Indian dozing in a wheelchair on his all-but-forgotten reservation vs. the homage society pays to youth, which is implicit in the concept of Boys Town.

All these contrasts were apparent to the roving band of Nebraskaland tourists.

Perhaps it was the statue outside Boys Town which pointed the contrasts up the most.

That statue enjoys world-wide fame. It is a statue of one boy carrying another, with these words at its base: "He ain't heavy father, he's my brother."

No such sentiment graces any statuary at the Indian reservation in northeast Nebraska.

Car-Train Crashes Raise Fatality Toll

By The Associated Press

A car-train collision killed a Kearney man early Sunday and a woman and her daughter died in a similar accident three miles south of Oakland Saturday.

The deaths raised Nebraska's 1974 traffic fatality toll to 155, compared with 182 at this time last year.

Kearney police and the State Patrol said Paul Hernandez, 20, of Kearney was killed when his small auto was in collision with the front engine of a westbound Union Pacific freight at a Kearney crossing.

Hernandez was pinned in the wreckage, which was carried about five city blocks by the train.

Mrs. Susan E. Odle, 27, and her two-year-old daughter Amy Sue of West Point died in the collision of the car in which they were riding and a Burlington Northern train three miles south of Oakland.

The State Patrol said the car was driven by Mrs. Odle's husband, James, who was hospitalized with possible internal injuries.

The accident occurred at a county road crossing. The car was going east and the train was northbound.

AIM Supporter, Chief, Patrolman Hospitalized

Mission, S. D. (AP) — The chief of police at Mission, a patrolman and an American Indian Movement supporter were hospitalized following an altercation at the Mission Golf Course on the Rosebud Sioux Indian Reservation.

Mission authorities said Police Chief Tom Rhoads, about 24, and Ron Haukaas, in his early 30s, were hospitalized at Valentine, Neb., after the incident Saturday. Rhoads was released Sunday. Haukaas was listed in satisfactory condition.

Officials said AIM supporter Harvey Kills In Water was hospitalized in stable condition at Rapid City with a shooting wound.

Authorities said AIM leader Russell Means, Floyd Kenneth Kane and about 15 others entered the private golf clubhouse two miles south of Mission and asked to be served. Officers said they refused to leave when asked, and Rhoads and Haukaas were summoned.

Police said a battle ensued when the two officers arrived. They allegedly were beaten and their guns were taken before they escaped.

Authorities indicated that Kills In Water was shot after Rhoads and Haukaas left the clubhouse.

The FBI reported that warrants had been issued for the arrest of Means and Kane, charging them with assault with intent to inflict serious bodily injury.

Means is on trial at St. Paul, Minn., for his alleged role in the 71 day AIM-led occupation of Wounded Knee last year. He was to appear in court Monday at St. Paul.

A preliminary hearing for Means has been set for Friday in Sioux Falls in connection with an incident at the Minnehaha County Courthouse April 30. Some $10,000 damage was done to the courthouse in that incident.

4-H, FFA Members Face Losses On Beef Projects

Beatrice (AP) — Unless a major upward trend develops in the cattle markets, young 4-H and FFA members will take a financial beating with their market beef projects this year.

Many will be selling their finished steers for prices below the break-even point.

Feeder steers in the 600-pound range were selling for $40.70 during the week of March 1 when 125 Gage County Youngsters took their newly purchased animals to the annual Weigh Day in Beatrice.

The average price for a 1,100-pound steer last week was more than $10 per hundred below that March 1 purchase price and represents a sizeable loss if the price doesn't increase before county fair time.

Steve Goes, a 1974 Beatrice High School graduate, figured it cost him less than $100 per animal to finish out two steers in time for the county fair last year. But this year, young Goes will be putting more than $200 worth of

Carnival Ride Accident Injures N. Platte Trio

North Platte (UPI) — Three persons were hospitalized here Saturday night after a carnival ride accident.

Authorities said Mrs. John Cassilas, Ramona Cassilas and Ruby Guerra, all of North Platte, were taken to the hospital after being thrown from the Himalaya Ride at the carnival which has been here in conjunction with the Nebraskaland Days celebration.

Mrs. Cassilas complained of back and neck injuries, officials said, while the other two persons were apparently only shaken up.

The cause of the accident was still being investigated.

Wallace Richardson, president-elect of Rotary Club No. 14, will speak on the Rotarians' international convention at a noon meeting of that organization Tuesday. It will be at the Radisson-Coralusker Hotel.

Zzz . . . Ngcawww . . . Whe-ooo

No Marital Bliss? Maybe You Hiss

By JUDY KLEMESRUD

New York — Ngcawwwwww
... whe-ooo-o-o-o. Ngcawwwwww m m m whe-ooo-o-o-o. Those are the sounds of snoring, a habit that affects 35 million Americans and has been known to cause chaos in college dormitories, havoc in military barracks, and splitsville in once blissful marriages.

Dr. Marcus H. Boulware once had a blissful marriage, or at least he thought he did. What he didn't know was that he snored very loudly, something his wife was too polite to tell him about until it was too late.
Finally, she divorced him.

"Snoring wasn't the only reason, of course," Boulware, a 66-year-old speech pathologist at Florida A & M University said here in an interview.
"But it certainly was one of the reasons."

Confused and hurt by the experience, Boulware rushed to an ear and throat specialist for advice on how he could stop being a nocturnal nuisance. The specialist laughed, and snipped off the tip of Boulware's uvula (the tip of the soft palate).

It didn't work. The trumpeting continued, and as a result, Boulware became so fascinated by what he was doing while asleep that he has spent many of his waking hours since that visit eight years ago to the doctor's office researching, thinking, and writing about snoring.

The result is "Snoring" (American Faculty Press $6.95), a new book about the subject that is humorous and serious at the same time.
Boulware doesn't pretend that he knows how to cure snoring, but he does round up the various causes and provides several suggestions that may prevent this family nuisance from becoming a catastrophe.

Despite his own experience, Boulware, a courtly, 6-foot 3-inch man, agrees that "the best thing, of course, is to go to a doctor."

"But a lot of people," he added,
"are reluctant to do this because they don't think it's serious enough. Many snorers are embarrassed; they feel ashamed about it. Really, they shouldn't, because it's just a natural thing — some doctors think it's just necessary as sneezing or coughing."

Quoting from a paper written by Dr.
Ian G. Robin, a British otolaryngologist who is one of the few doctors to do snoring research, Boulware said that a cure for snoring is possible in about 50% of the cases; that 30% can be helped by palliative measures; and that 20% seem hopelessly incurable.

Boulware, who spent five years researching his book (he had a $1,200 grant from the Carnegie Foundation), said that among the causes of snoring are: swelling of the tissues of the throat and nasal passages; obstructions and growths in the nasal passages; deviation of the septum; smoking; obesity; neuroses; drinking;

and even air pollution.

There are almost as many "cures"
for snoring as there are causes, Boulware said, including dieting, dream analysis, anti-snoring devices, self-hypnosis, nose and throat surgery, allergy and sinus treatments, corrective dentistry, and phonetic exercises.

And, now that he is no longer married, he doesn't really care much whether he snorts, buzzes, hisses, rasps or gurgles when he sleeps.

"No, I don't worry about it anymore," he said, grinning sheepishly. "You might say I've relaxed."

Sen. Curtis Defends Tiemann In Nebraska-FHA Signs Fight

Washington (AP) — Sen. Carl Curtis came to the defense of Federal Highway Administrator
Norbert Tiemann Sunday in the Nebraska highway signs squabble.

"The plain facts are," the Nebraska Republican said, "that Gov. Exon and his chief highway engineer have been uncompromising to the point of making it impossible for anyone upholding the law and the need for certain basic highway safety rules to help them out."

Curtis said he investigated the problem after a request from Exon to the Congressional delegation for assistance and after the governor's public statements blaming former Nebraska Gov. Tiemann for ruling against him in the dispute.

Tiemann has notified State Engineer Thomas Doyle that $39 million in federal funds for primary highway construction in the state will be cut off if the signs are left in their current locations along Interstate 80.

Curtis said Tiemann acted on the basis of information and recommendations made by the 30-member National Advisory Committee on Uniform Traffic Control Devices.

Curtis said the committee was made up entirely of state and local traffic experts and persons from private industry.

"They approved Nebraska's tourist sign project in advance," Curtis said, "on condition that it be an experiment limited to the 1972 tourist season, financed totally without federal funds, and that the State Highway Department would submit a report afterward on its findings with particular emphasis on tangible benefits derived from this signing."

Curtis said the Nebraska Department of Roads submitted the report after the one-year experiment but was not able to convince any member of the committee that the Nebraska highway signs were proper.

A subcommittee of the committee unanimously recommended disapproval of Nebraska's request for exemption from or a change in the standards, Curtis said. The full committee in turn recommended to Tiemann that the request be rejected, he added.

Curtis said Tiemann "has not been at all hard-nosed" in dealing with Exon and Doyle on the problem.

"Rather, Administrator Tiemann has pointed out that the federal law and the regulations implementing it allow tourist signs of similar type to be erected along the edge of the highway right-of-way," Curtis said.

Curtis said Tiemann has "offered to overlook irregularities in the size of Nebraska's signs and the content of the messages they convey. But he has said the signs must be moved further away from the pavement in order to comply with the safety purposes of the federal law and standards."

The compromise ought to be accepted, Curtis said, in the interest of saving the signs.

Tornado Rips Trailer Court; 1 Badly Injured

Rocky Mount, N.C. (UPI) — Eleven persons were injured one believed seriously, and 10 trailers damaged Sunday when a tornado ripped through a trailer park several miles east of here.

The state Highway Patrol said
the seriously injured person, Joseph R. Harrison, 22, was taken by ambulance to Duke Hospital in Chapel Hill. Ten others, mostly women and children, were treated at Nash General Hospital in Rocky Mount for bruises and cuts and released.

Patrol Sgt. B. R. Inscow said upon arriving on the scene at Mobile City Estates, "from the observation of the trailers, it's a miracle nobody was killed."

House Eyes Takeover Of Building

Washington (AP) — Rallying behind a congressman who says expanded office space is far more important than the storage of books, the House is trying to take over a $90 million Library of Congress building.

But the Senate, at least for now, stands in the way of the move to convert the James Madison Memorial Building, now going up on Capitol Hill, into suites for ever-growing congressional staffs.

The structure is designed to house the overflow of books, manuscripts and other historical materials from the main Library of Congress building across the street.

Ringleader of the takeover attempt is Rep. Fortney H.

"Pete" Stark, D-Calif., who has the supporting signatures of nearly 200 members and the sympathetic ear of Speaker Carl Albert. All this encourages him to put the odds at better than even that the House will get its hands on at least part of the Madison building's 2 million square feet of floor space.

office buildings and a converted hotel.

"The problem of trying to provide remotely adequate space is the biggest administrative problem we have," an aide to Speaker Albert said.

As one alternative, the House has been investigating the possibility of building underground offices — an idea Stark rejects. "Put the books underground," he said. "We need human space."

N. Carolina Governor Supported

Washington (UPI) — A committee to support former Gov.
Terry Sanford of North Carolina for the Democratic presidential nomination announced its formation Sunday.

The "Citizens Committee to Nominate Terry Sanford" will be headed by former Gov. Hulett
C. Smith of West Virginia. It has registered with the Office of Federal Elections (OFE) and will make regular reports of its receipts and expenditures on Sanford's behalf.

The law also requires Sanford to agree to formation of a campaign committee. Smith released a statement in Sanford's name giving consent to formation of the group, but firmly declaring that he was not announcing a presidential candidacy.

Boston Fire Kills 5, Injures 1

BOSTON (AP) — Five people died and a sixth was seriously injured Sunday in a fire in a three-story house in the Dorchester section of Boston.

Killed were Cheryl Graham, 23; her two children, Stanley, 5, and Carla, 1; and Mrs. Graham's two sisters, Candy Link, 16, and Vera Link, 15.

Marshall Ellis, 29, was injured when he leaped from the third floor, said fire department spokesman Capt. John Collins.
Ellis was reported in serious condition in Carney Hospital in Dorchester.

Families in the first two floors were safely evacuated from the house. The arson squad was investigating the fire, said Deputy Fire Chief Robert Hamilton.

Girl Safe; Man Drowns While Attempting Rescue

Little Sioux, Iowa (AP) — A fishing trip for a group of young persons ended in tragedy Sunday when the group's apparent chaperone drowned while attempting to save the life of a 10-year-old girl.

Police Investigate $700 Naval Burglary

Police are investigating a burglary at the Naval Reserve Training Center at 1625 No. 10th
Saturday night or Sunday morning in which items valued at nearly $700 were taken.

Police said entrance to the building was gained through an unlocked window and a television, medical equipment and other items were taken from offices.

Authorities said Leon Lan-drum, 50, of Omaha, Neb., drowned in the Little Sioux River while trying to rescue Darlene Henderson of Cleveland, Ohio. The girl was rescued by Earl Ashmore, 31, of Sioux City.

Ashmore was fishing near the Little Sioux Dam with his two boys when he saw the girl go under.

Authorities were still dragging the river near the dam Sunday night for Landrum's body.

8 ways to save money on air conditioning.

- 1 Set thermostat no lower than necessary for comfort—78 degrees is recommended. In the average 1,200 square foot home, you'll save as much as $25 during the air conditioning season by setting your thermostat at 78 rather than 73 degrees.
- 2 Replace disposable filters or clean permanent type filters at least once a month. Clogged filters make your air conditioner work harder and use more electricity
- 3 Provide for adequate ventilation in your attic with vents that will exhaust heat and prevent heat buildup from radiating through the ceiling into your living areas.
- 4 See that the ceilings and walls of your home are properly insulated and that doors and windows are weatherstripped. A minimum of 6 inches of insulation in attics and 3½ inches in outside walls is recommended.
- 5 Keep the outdoor unit free of grass or other obstructions that might prevent proper air circulation.
- 6 Keep windows and fireplace dampers closed to prevent the loss of cool air and the infiltration of hot air.
- 7 Shade windows from direct sunlight with awnings, blinds or draperies —this will reduce the amount of electricity your unit will use.
- 8 Leave the fan of your air conditioner on constantly. Air circulation reduces the need for cooling.

Remember...electricity is valuable. Please don't waste it.

'A woman without a hat is like a picture without a frame'

Photo's By Randy Hampton

Perforated straw fashions this wide-brimmed hat (center) which is ideal for sportswear. Another casual style (far right) is a white, eyelet kerchief worn low on the forehead.

Hats Off . . . To Hats

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

"And, don't forget the hat" is the motto in today's fashion world, where hats of all sizes and shapes have suddenly experienced a popular rebirth.

"The most important look for summer is the brim," said Marie Carlmark of Hovland-Swanson. "Brims are of various widths, but the larger brim has been the greater fashion news."

"Women are buying anything that has a brim," concurred Randie Andrews of Sears. "The young girls like to wear them with jeans and halters."

"We feature four main styles of hats — the visor cap, the Panama hat, the bridesmaid hat for the 'romantic look' and the felt hat," said Paula Dicero of the Montgomery Wards fashion accessory department, adding, "large brims are 'in'."

"And the price has been so attractive that young career and college girls are encountering their first adventure with hats," explained Mrs. Carlmark.

She also emphasized the versatility of today's hats, which, by a mere change in trim, can be worn with a bathing suit or to a wedding.

"In the city, they're wearing a lot of hats," she continued. "Women do their own thing — express their individuality by tying a scarf around the crown or adding a pin or flowers," such as the now-popular lacquered, patent leather flowers in black, white, red or beige.

According to Mrs. Carlmark, the "status brim" has been in the natural Panama straw.

"We received dozens and dozens of them in early April and we just couldn't keep them in stock," she noted, indicating the upsurge in popularity.

"It is a fun, fun story," she said while gesturing towards natural straw millinery including those with hand-painted designs encircling the base of the crown or extending diagonally from crown to brim, perforated straw hats from mainland China or Taiwan and two-tone hats with a natural brim and black crown.

And the list of styles goes on and on — cotton, brimmed hats of eyelet or quilted, reversible gingham; the bandanna kerchief or the traditional polyester kerchief; the visor kerchief, polyester bands featuring an open crown; the tennis cloche . . . and the turban.

"We've sold loads of sun turbans," Mrs. Carlmark commented. "They're made out of polyester or stretch, velour terry in beautiful colors."

"Most often you will see the turban worn with sunglasses. It seems as if they just belong together."

"Also, we have sold a lot of the thin, matte jersey turbans, which women often wear with wide-brimmed hats," she explained.

"Young girls like to wear the brim or visor hats of denim," added Mrs. Andrews, "especially if they are made out of old blue jeans."

"We also have sold many bicycle and tennis hats with the visor and open crown."

"To me," Mrs. Carlmark concluded, "a woman without a hat is like a picture without a frame."

"The romantic look" is completed with a light floppy hat, decorated by graceful cloth flower.

Youngsters Get In Fall Fashion Act

SPECIAL TO THE STAR

Spring Lake, N.J. — What will little girls and their junior high school age sisters wear to school come fall? In the last showing of the New York Couture Business Council's press week, Corduroy and Simplicity patterns teamed up to show some trends.

It's likely that the Big Top will be worn over pants for one outfit — and these will be in the teens sizes. A jade green top was worn with pinwale cotton corduroy for a good looking outfit. For little sister an emerald green smock top was over matching pants.

For cooler days there is a jacket and bell bottom pants in red and ticking stripe printed overall with flower embroidery. For the very small girl, print in bib pants with an eyelet trim is smart. An A-line jumper in blue over an eyelet blouse is great for any little girl. The tiny model wore long tights to match her jumper.

And for a very dress-up occasion a red cotton corduroy dress has puffed sleeves and gathered skirt. The dress is trimmed with Cluny lace.

In the first fashion clinic of the Men's Fashion Assn. (MFA) held here at the Monmouth hotel, Chip Tolbert, MFA Fashion director, showed several tailored looks for boys. A very small lad wore a tan twill weatherproof coat of mixed mad-made fibers. His older brother a navy twill in the same double-breasted style.

For dress-up time, a 10-year old just might choose the gray worsted flannel suit. Andrew, a high schooler, modeled a green and orange plaid on tweed ground suit that had a matching vest.

When the five-year-old model streaked along the runway, he was in a navy polyester flannel double-breasted blazer with navy and white houndstooth check slacks. The fashion director explained that the show was completely unrehearsed, as writers had probably guessed.

Ernest a bit older wore a blue polyester and tweed jacket with blue, white and burgundy checked slacks. The outfit comes in sizes 6 to 16. Another small boy wore a camel polyester gabardine jacket and plaid wool and nylon slacks.

Writers gasped as Kenny cut the corners of the zig-zag runway so closely that at times it seemed he would miss the turn.

Chip said that plaids had been around as long as he could remember and felt that there would be no more plaids on the market this year. "After a week of researching, I discovered how wrong I was," he said as he introduced four plaid jackets. "They are for all males from 5 to 95, he said. The models were all young boys. One was a multicolor mixture of acrylic and cotton; the second a camel, navy, red and white plaid, the third a blue, rust and beige wool and nylon, and the fourth was camel, green, white and orange in wool and nylon. Slacks worn picked up the predominant color of the plaids.

DEAR ABBY: Harvey is 76, and I am a few years younger. We've been married for two years, both having lost our mates in death.

My problem is his interest in other women. He says he just likes to "talk."

We went to the Bahamas for a holiday, and he took up with an old maid he met in the hotel lobby. She was with a tour, but found Harvey so fascinating she stayed behind and let the group go on without her. (Now don't tell me all he gave her was conversation!)

When Harvey was in the hospital for a few days for tests he called up an old girl friend, and she came to visit him. Even with me in the room he held her hand, and they talked over old times. The head nurse told him he couldn't have any more visitors after that because it ran up his blood pressure. You can imagine how humiliated I was.

Divorce is not the answer. If it weren't for this thing he has about other women he'd be a good man.

I'm considering inviting two or three women over every day, and let him get all talked out. Should I, or not?

HURT

DEAR HURT: I wouldn't. Harvey might have more conversation in him than you think.

DEAR ABBY: How does a parent deal with this new breed of woman? I need advice on this matter. Somehow I find it hard to accept this business of living together without marrying.

Am I wrong to deny them sleeping quarters together in my house?

My daughter is well educated, with a master's degree from a fine eastern university. She is only dumb where men are concerned.

NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO: What your adult offspring do away from home is their business. What they do in your home is YOUR business. If you don't feel right about their sharing sleeping quarters in your home, tell them so. And if they don't like it, they can stay at a motel.

DEAR ABBY: A year and a half ago I met Jim. I was five months pregnant at the time. I told him about it, but he said he loved kids and he wanted to marry me and he would never hold against me the fact that I had had another man's child. He wouldn't even consider my suggestion that maybe I should give up my baby as soon as it was born.

I was so happy I thought I had died and gone to heaven. All of a sudden, Jim changed his mind. Now he wants me to give my baby away. He says he can't love another man's child. Abby, I have grown to love my son, and I can't give him up now.

I love Jim, too, and don't know what I would do without him. Is he being unfair, or am I wrong to expect him to accept another man's child?

Please help me. I am all mixed up. I am 20 and Jim is 25.

ALONE

DEAR ALONE: Jim is unfair. He agreed to accept your child. If he now finds that he cannot, you must decide whether you will have fewer regrets giving up Jim or giving up your son. No one can make that choice for you. God bless.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "DESPERATE OLD MAID": At 29 you are far from an "old maid," so drop that label. And don't act so desperate. Think of yourself as a whole individual, not a half looking for another half.

eight East returned a diamond, the jack forcing the ace, and declarer led a heart to the ace before playing another low trump.

West won with the queen, cashed the king of diamonds, and gave East a diamond ruff. West eventually scored his high trump and South went down two. His losers were the king of diamonds and four trump tricks.

At the second table, the bidding and the outcome were quite different. The bidding went:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♦
Pass	Pass	4 ♠

West led the three of hearts and declarer decided that, since West could not have the K-Q of hearts and lead a low heart, he probably had the A-Q of spades for his overall.

Accordingly, after winning East's ten of hearts with the ace, he returned the king of spades in order to stop East from taking the lead for a diamond return. West won with the ace and played another heart. Declarer ruffed and, pursuing his plan, returned the jack of spades. West took the queen and led a third heart.

South ruffed and, playing his most inspired game, cashed the K-A of clubs, ruffed a club with the five, and returned the six of spades to West's four and East's ten.

Dummy's Q-7 of clubs now provided a parking place for declarer's diamonds, and South thus made four spades as a result of his brilliant play. His only losers were three trump tricks.

Hand-Bell Concerts Next Week

The Wesley Bell Ringers of Christ United Methodist Church in Salt Lake City, Utah, will present a free, public concert at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Omaha Room of the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education.

The concert is scheduled in conjunction with the Hand-Bell Festival of Area 8, American Guild of English Hand-Bell Ringers, to be held at the Nebraska Center Monday through Wednesday. Approximately 500 hand-bell ringers from Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Kansas and Missouri are expected to attend the annual meeting, according to Russell Blackmer, music director at First Presbyterian Church, festival chairman.

The Wesley Choir, directed by Ed Duncan, is currently on its ninth annual tour. During those years, it has appeared in 40 states, three Canadian provinces, the White House, Disney World and Mt. Rushmore.

Another public bell-ringing concert — this time a series of mass and individual performances by the 500 festival participants — will take place at the Nebraska Center at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 26.

Directing will be Dr. Andrew Flanagan of Dallas, Tex., treasurer of the American Guild and member of the Choristers Guild of America.

 Paradise Mills — Never legally abandoned, this historic little York County hamlet is still flourishing with a population of two...
 And that's the way it'll stay if Lyle Murphey has anything to say about it.
 Murphey lives with his mother in a mobile home on some 22 acres just north of Thayer. The tract encompasses the ruins of the little town, known originally as Mills, once an important Lincoln Creek crossing and site of a mill which did a bustling business between 1897 and 1943.
Bought For A Park
 "I bought the property simply to make a park out of it," says Murphey, whose address is listed on his driver's license as Murphey Park, Paradise Mills, Nebr. "I'd like to see some of these places marked and kept open to the public."
 "The world's moving too fast," he observes. "Once this is gone, it's gone forever. I'm not going to let it get away."

A bachelor who retired early — very early — to enjoy his various hobbies and pet projects, Murphey took his stand here in 1962. That was the year an electric substation was built on his parents' land near York, making it unsafe for his then-favorite pursuit: sky diving.

 So he bought Mills, later renaming it Paradise Mills to avoid confusion with another Nebraska town.
 While bulldozing the side of a hill a couple years later, Murphey discovered the remains of a cluster of sod houses. It was then that the full historic import of his ghost town became clear to him.
 He "took eight years off," he recalls, to study the history of the old village "so I wouldn't destroy any more of it." A local history buff since he was a youngster, Murphey began digging up public-record information, private diaries and correspondence to fill in his knowledge of the old town.
2 Sources
 "I demand three sources of evidence before I believe that such-and-such was so," Murphey says. The best way to resolve discrepancies in evidence, he adds, is to "get two or three people who would know about the same period talking, and they'll put the pieces together."
 It took him six years to remove all the trash left on the site from the years when it was used as a dumping ground, Murphey says. And it has taken nearly as long to haul in all his own historical acquisitions.

"Instead of going out and getting drunk on Saturday night and two or three times during the week, I collect junk," Murphey says.
Murphey's 'Junk'
 "There's a lot of junk setting around — someday I'll get most of it fixed up, and some of it'll be left for someone else to do it."
 Murphey's "junk" includes:
 —The mail-boxes from the Mills post office, the second established in York County ("I had to buy the whole post office to get 'em"), as well as postal sections from the railroad depot at Gresham.
 —The 1927 Chevy truck used at the mill to haul grain and flour.
 —The two largest steam engines remaining in York County and the surrounding area. One, a 1914 Altman-Taylor, weighs 14 tons; the other, a 1912 Case, weighs 12 tons. Each holds over 300 gallons of water.
 —A 1952 Crosley automobile in running condition.
 —The generator from the defunct York radio station KGBZ.
 —A propeller from an airplane Murphey used to fly. "The rest of the airplane was still intact too," he hastens to explain.
 —A Colt .45 that belonged to his great-grandfather, who lived nearby, and a hefty eight-gauge "goose gun."

 —A boiler from the steam generating plant at Gresham.
 —A gargoye of a steam engine built by deceased Edgar blacksmith Ed Bottom from a Stanley Steamer engine, hay baler wheels and various spare parts.
 —A miniature steam locomotive purchased by Murphey's father, now set up to run on some 250 feet of track.
Museum
 Eventually, Murphey hopes to fulfill his late father's dream of converting the village's last remaining building — originally a store — into a museum of sorts. It would house all manner of Mills relics, including working machinery to be "fired up" for the enjoyment of old-timers and the edification of the young.
 Besides the historic attractions, "Murphey Park" contains pleasant greenery, meadows suitable for camping, and a mill pond sometimes used for boating, fishing and swimming. An anonymous private source of funds until recently made it possible for Murphey to maintain the area for safe public access.
 That source of funds has been cut off, however, and Murphey fears he will have to discontinue public access unless something new turns up.

Almost Too Late
 Too many local historians feel that something they can't personally remember couldn't have existed, Murphey complains. "You just can't get 'em to do anything till it's almost too late... maybe in four or five years someone will pick this up."
 "If anyone picks up on it, I think it'll be this little historical society we've got," he says. The Paradise Mills Historical Society, founded not quite two years ago, numbers some 45 members, he says. Murphey serves as president.
 The society hosts an annual Hobby and Engine Day at Paradise Mills and invites the public to come out and ride the steam locomotive, view antique dish and quilt displays and inspect Murphey's assorted "junk."
Event In July
 This year's event is scheduled for the afternoons of Saturday and Sunday, July 20-21. Admission is free.
 Murphey won't be satisfied, however, until the public fully appreciates such historic treasures as Paradise Mills. "I'm thinking of buying a newspaper," he muses, "just to be able to say a few things that need to be said."

Dr. Cowan Ending Long Medical Career

Falls City — Dr. Samuel D. Cowan Sr., dean of the active medical profession in Falls City, plans to close the door on his 63-year career July 1. Semi-retired for the past two years, the eye, ear, nose and throat specialist has spent 60 of his 63 years of medical practice in Falls City. A native of Halleck, Mo., Dr. Cowan, 84, served as a medical officer in World War I. His son, Dr. Sam Cowan Jr., is also in the medical practice in Falls City.

Albion Fire Hall Election July 1

Albion — A special election will be held here Monday, July 1, on a $40,000 bond issue for a fire hall. Plans call for the city to be reimbursed half of that cost by the Albion Rural Fire Department. The proposed building would be a metal building of which a portion would be used as a community room. The issue was placed on the ballot via petition.

Hastings Band First In Competition

North Platte — The 32-member Hastings St. Cecilia School marching band walked off with first place in overall band competition during Nebraska Days here. Debbie Hedlund serves the band as drum majorette while the No. 1 twirler is Karen Hedlund. Director is Joe Aerisophal. North Platte's High School band placed second.

Turkey Days Slated At Oxford

Oxford — Plans have been completed for the annual three-day Turkey Days celebration to be held here, starting Thursday. Events scheduled will include a tasting tea, talent show, soap box derby, kiddie parade, horseshoe pitching contest, 4-H horse and cattle show, kid's races, and model airplane show in addition to the turkey feed.

Laramie, Wyo. — Dr. Walter B. Ludwig of Laramie was recently elected to the board of directors of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City, Okla. He grew up in Lincoln and on the family place in Kimball County. Later he raised cattle on his own ranch along the Colorado-Wyoming border near Virginia Dale, Colo.

Apfels Face Tough Future In Family Dairy Business

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Last year this newspaper featured Allan and Cathy Apfel as our young dairy farmers during June Dairy Month.

This year we returned to see if they were still there in the face of a much tougher economic situation for dairymen.

In one year the young couple has seen a lot of changes. Michael has been promoted from baby to toddler at 18 months and has a new 4-month-old sister, Michelle.

The dairy equipment is one year older but seems to have stood up well after a year's hard use milking an average of 80 cows twice daily for the past year.

Cathy demonstrated considerable skill scrubbing down the milk house with a water hose while maneuvering Michael out of the water stream with practiced ease while baby sister watched from the security of a play pen in the corner of the milk house.

Family Cooperation
 Allan scrubbed down the milking parlor after milking in what is clearly a family operation that features a lot of cooperation between the young couple.

The Apfels continue to raise most of the hay and silage on their own farm while buying 150 tons of silage, 1,500 bales of hay and all their grain. "We get by pretty good if we don't get dry weather. If it got real dry I might have to cull down the poorer cows but we are getting by so far in spite of higher grain prices," said Allan.

Prices on everything they buy for their operation have shot up alarmingly in the last year. Milk prices are up too, but not nearly enough to cover the increased costs and milk prices have started to drop on the farm.

Fuel is costing 48¢ for gasoline compared to 28-31¢ last year. Distillate burned in tractors has jumped from 19¢ a gallon last year to 45¢ this year.

Grain Price Doubled
 Grain prices have nearly doubled and protein prices which were at all time record prices have dropped but are starting to edge upward again. "It takes about $500 a week for each time the feed truck backs up to the building here," Allan noted.

Allan and Cathy feel the cost price squeeze in dairying but think they will stay at it. "We feel pretty good when we see what is happening to hog and cattle feeders," Cathy said.

Both expect to see milk prices drop further, endangering their future. "Grain prices have to stay quite high if the grain farmer is going to make it. If they do drop after harvest we may be better off but the grain farmer will be in real trouble because of the huge jump in fertilizer, fuel and machinery costs this year," Allan said.
 Time for baling hay has more than tripled in price, jumped from $7 for a bale of two rolls last year to nearly $30 this year, if it can be found at all.

Nice, But Challenging
 "We have a tremendous investment so we have to stay in business and milk the investment out of the cattle. Farming is a nice life but I don't know if I would advise a young couple to start or not. It is a real challenge to keep going," Allan said.

"Unless something unexpected happens I think we will be here when you check on us next year. We really don't have all that much choice now with the investment," he added.

Many dairymen have quit; so many that a technician who artificially breeds dairy cows told the Apfels that he had 500 fewer cows to breed just in Lancaster County this year because farmers are giving up dairying as a money losing proposition.

Without people like the Apfels city folks may find themselves eating dry cereal for breakfast without milk.

Spotlight on Agriculture

Farm Editor

Joyce Kilmer wrote of trees as things of beauty but they can also be a money producer if they are handled right.

There is the firewood sales route for the city dude who has a fireplace and subconsciously worships fire or quite consciously hates paying high gas bills.

There is also the possibility of tree farming by removing many lower limbs on trees to produce better logs for lumber along with some care to make the trees grow faster.

The promise of dollars often stumbles on the altar of inexperience and a sharp tongued timber buyer who bilks the farmer out of his lumber-producing trees.

Most farmers market trees once or twice in a lifetime so the chance to gain experience is limited. One timber buyer is reported to be offering 10¢ a foot for trees known to be worth 60¢ a foot for walnut lumber in eastern Nebraska. He is getting away with it because of a lack of information available to the seller.

If you have trees that you think are large enough to be sold for lumber, a walnut patch with some trees large enough to sell for furniture etc., you can get help from the forestry extension service on the east campus of the University of Nebraska in Lincoln.

They can appraise your trees and will even advertise that you have some for sale in "Timber Talks," a small publication that goes to people who turn trees into various products.

Just write to Neal E. Jennings, extension forester at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln East Campus.

Jennings advises that it can be more profitable to sell the trees on the stump than by cutting them for logs because buyers can be more sure of the quality when they see the live standing tree.

The Environmental Protection Agency office has issued what it calls permission to discharge livestock waste into the waters of any given state. Similar permits are used in industry; however, the term "permit to discharge" is misleading and is causing public relations problems.

Actually it involves some very strict regulations on what can be discharged in addition to the quality of what is discharged into any stream or body of water.

The permission "to discharge" is usually limited to unusual situations such as a storm that might happen once in 10 years. It is definitely not a permit to pollute, which some uninformed folks reading the notices seem to believe.

You would think that with all the expertise in bureaucratic gobbledegook in Washington, someone could have come up with a better piece of terminology for the regulation.

The move by the federal government that would permit Americans to buy and own gold for the first time since the depression could have an important effect on the price of grain.

Much of the speculative interest in grain futures has stemmed from a search for security.

The availability of gold and silver for investment may drain off some of these funds which have been put into grain futures. Storing valuable metals is expensive but so is playing the futures market if you make a mistake.

Nebraska cow-calf operators are being encouraged to join the American National Cattlemen Association (ANCA). The organization is putting a lot of dollars into a nationwide information program aimed at telling their story to the consumer.

According to Merlyn Carlson of Lodgepole, this is not a meat promotion program but an effort to sell the industry by developing a better image for the industry.

The idea is to build a favorable attitude toward the cattle industry which hopefully will produce an improved political and economic climate in which to operate.

ANCA is also working to get beef import restrictions reinstated during the present period of increasing cattle production.

The International Federation of Agricultural Producers (IFAP) deplored the low floor prices under U.S. grain production in its recent meeting in Austria. The federation is made up of farm organizations in many countries, most of which have high prices supported by government farm protection programs.

Their reason for fearing our lower support price system is they have reason to believe our price will become the world grain price this fall and winter. Farmers everywhere must make a profit or quit farming.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Wheat farmers are holding tight to their crop this year. Boxcars are sitting idle because farmers refuse to sell their grains at current prices.

Farmers are convinced that official USDA estimates and projections of the 1974 crop are full of baloney, so they feel they will wait a while before they sell.

Grain dealers who held off buying for the harvest but had made commitments to deliver wheat are scrambling to buy the limited supply available.

There is enough storage in wheat country for the first time since the end of World War II and wheat farmers have enough eating money to avoid selling for a while.

Apparently most of the wheat being sold is coming from wheat farmers who are also livestock producers. They are hurting for cash and are forced to market their wheat.

About half of Nebraska's wheat crop is grown by farmers who raise some livestock and other feed grains. Some of these farmers are very short of cash so I expect to see a slightly higher portion of our wheat crop sold than has been the case in Kansas and Oklahoma but most of our farmers will hold.

There is plenty of one-the-farm storage and most of the elevators have managed to ship the government-owned grain they have been trying to get loaded out for the past two years.

The consumer is going to have to go to the farmer and say how much instead of the farmer begging for enough to make ends meet. For families on the farm that is a nice change.

Lincoln Pin Oaks Suffer 'Tired Sap'

According to City Forester Wayne Willmeng, about one-third of Lincoln's pin oaks are suffering from chlorosis or "tired sap."

Between 3,000 and 4,000 pin oaks in the city show the symptoms of chlorosis, Willmeng said, and if left untreated, the trees will eventually die.

Iron can be added in several ways, he said, but if the soil around the roots is highly alkaline, the iron can't be absorbed.

The homeowner should try to reduce the alkalinity of the soil as well as feed the tree, Willmeng advised.

Dick Campbell, a local nurseryman, outlined three methods of feeding iron to pin oaks, all of which can be done by the homeowner himself.

—For trees with trunks less than four inches in diameter, Campbell suggests burying an iron compound about a foot underground at the very branch edges of the trees.

—For trees with trunks larger than four inches in diameter, iron capsules can be injected into the trunks.

—The third method uses water pressure to inject capsules through an iron rod and down around the root system.

Campbell said the second method is easiest and if done properly shows results quickly. However, longer lasting effects can be achieved by feeding the roots.

Tournaments Set July 12 For Hula Hoops, Frisbees

Citywide Hula Hoop and Frisbee tournaments, sponsored by the Parks and Recreation Department, will be July 12 at the Auld Recreation Center, 3140 Summer. The contests will begin at 6 p.m.

Both boy and girl city champs will be eligible to proceed to the state finals, with state finalists going to the regional championships.

A $1,000 U.S. Savings Bond scholarship is awarded to the national champion, with $500 and $250 scholarship bonds going to the second- and third-place finishers.

Preliminary competition for the Lincoln tournaments will be broken down into two age group categories, 11 and under and 12 through 15, by July 1.

Lincoln Woman Found Dead Of Gunshot Wound

A Lincoln woman was found dead of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound to her head Sunday night, according to police reports.

Police said Linda Weaver, 22, of 2625 No. 9th, was found in her home by a neighbor who was trying to locate her for her parents.

Police could not determine the exact time of death, but estimated she had been dead for more than 18 hours.

A note was found at the scene.

Vets Honor Barnett
Lincoln State Sen. Wally Barnett received a service award from the Lincoln Disabled American Veterans and Auxiliary at a ceremony Sunday night.

Music news is covered thoroughly in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

Colbert Wins American Golf Title In Sudden-Death Play

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Jim Colbert said a change of strategy, of his way of thinking and playing, could have been the key factor in his playoff victory in the American Golf Classic Sunday.

"I think I'd been overestimating my ability and underestimating my intestinal fortitude," the chipper, highly-competitive Colbert said after he'd made a scrambling par on the final hole of regulation play to win his way into a four-man playoff.

He had to make par from a bunker on the first playoff hole—he did it by making a 10 foot putt—and put away Ray Floyd, Gay Brewer and Forrest Fezler in two holes of sudden death.

"I came out here on the tour (nine years ago) with a lot of guts, a good putting stroke and nothing else," he said.

"I decided to go back to those, to go with what I got—guts and putting stroke—and I'm a winner," he said.

"I'd been getting in position, playing pretty good, you know, then letting it get away in the last couple of rounds," said the little man who hadn't won this season but had finished in the top five in both the Masters and U. S. Open.

"I didn't like that. I was overestimating my ability and underestimating my guts."

The four players finished the wind-blown final round in a tie for the top at 281, one over par for four trips over the 7,180-yard Firestone Country Club course.

It was the first time since the 1971 Colonial Invitation that an over-par total had won a regular tour event—that is, excluding U.S. Opens. It also represented the largest number in a playoff since four men tied for first in the 1971 Kemper Open in Charlotte, N.C.

Fezler, a heart-broken runnerup for the fifth time in 18 months, and the veteran Brewer dropped out of the playoff with bogeys on the first extra hole. Fezler was bunkered and Brewer three-putted.

That sent Colbert and Floyd to "the monster," the 615-yard, par-five 16th hole.

Both drove the fairway and put their seconds short of the pond that guards the tiny green.

Colbert pitched onto the green and Floyd got his third shot up in the air but the wind knocked it down onto the bank. Colbert two-putted from 20 feet for par while Floyd tried to figure out what to do. He managed a beautiful chip five feet past the hole—then missed the putt.

It was Colbert's fourth victory in nine years on the pro tour. He collected $34,000 from the total purse of $170,000 and pushed his earnings to $73,000 for the year.

Each of the playoff losers got $13,147.

Four other players—Bert Yancey, Dwight Nevil, Jim Jamieson and J.C. Snead—missed getting in the playoff by a single stroke. They tied at 282.

Yancey had the best shot, but three-putted the final hole for a double bogey. Jamieson missed a 10-foot birdie putt on the same hole that would have gotten him in.

The gusty, blustery winds and chill temperatures combined to send scores soaring. Colbert and Floyd managed to match par 70 in the 18 holes that made up the regulation final round. Brewer had a 71 and Fezler took a 73, missing makeable birdie putts on the last three holes.

Yancey and Nevil had 72s, Jamieson a 73 and Snead 71.

Arnold Palmer matched the best round of the day, a one-under-par 69, and had a 285 total. The 1973 winner, Australian Bruce Crampton, took a 73-284, U.S. Open title-holder Hale Irwin had 73-290.

Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Gary Player and Johnny Miller did not compete in this event that immediately followed the American National championship.

There were 17 players locked within three shots of each other at the top when the day's play started. Seven players led or shared the lead at one time or another in the final round. Another half-dozen were within a single shot.

The drama came down to the last few holes—and it was mostly negative, players scrambling desperately into the wind, out of the rough, from behind trees, out of sand traps trying to save par.

First it was Floyd, who dropped a curling, 30-foot birdie putt on the 17th, then bogeyed the last hole after driving into trouble.

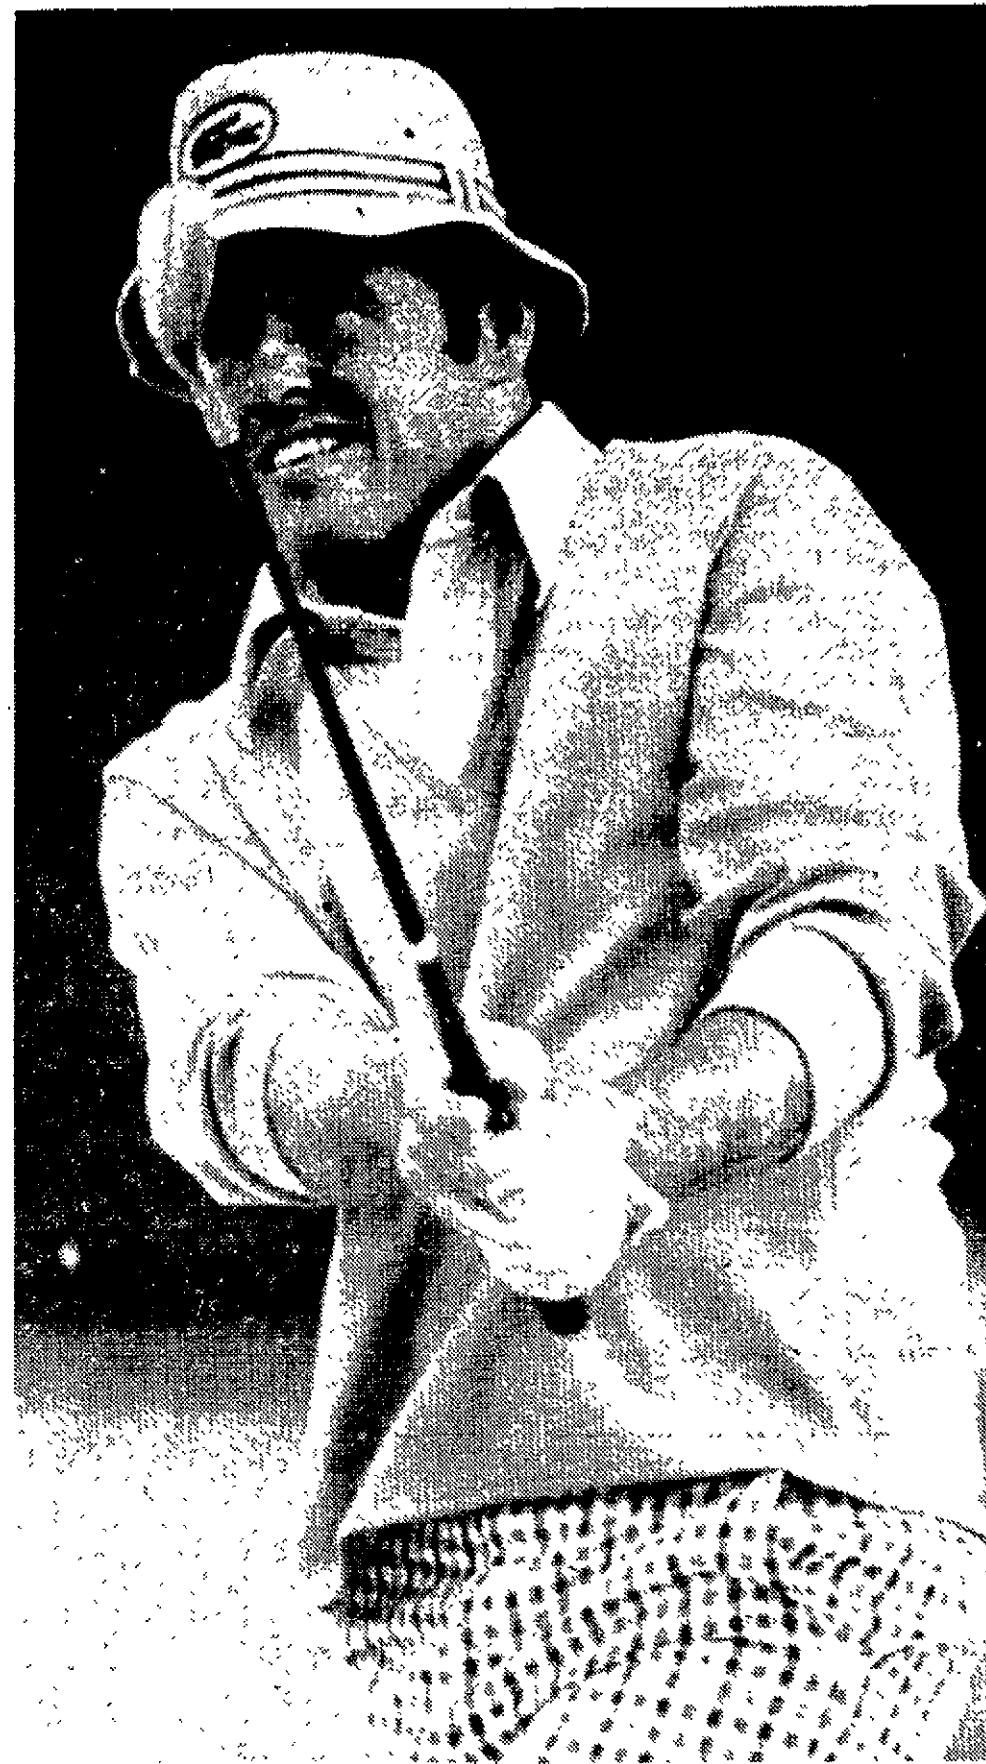

Next it was Colbert, who had to scramble for par on the 18th, then made a crucial chip to about 1½ feet to save par on the 18th.

Brewer had the lead alone when he came to the 18th, but he made bogey, also driving it into trouble on the left. Now it was Fezler. He also got his tee shot left, dropped out of ground under repair and hit a beautiful hook over and around a tree some 20 feet behind the hole.

He had that much for a birdie that would secure his first pro title. The putt missed and they went to the par three 15th for the playoff.

Floyd, Colbert and Fezler all bunkered their tee shots. Brewer was on the green, some 40 feet from the cup. Floyd and Colbert got it up and down for pars, Fezler made bogey and Brewer three-putted, missing a three-foot second putt.

That sent it to the 16th and Colbert's winner.

Jim Colbert chips near the pin on the first hole of a sudden death playoff with Gay Brewer, Ray Floyd and Forest Fezler.

Ida Grove Capitalizes To Win AAA Tourney

By BOB MOYER

An alert play by Pete Hanson ruined a beautiful pitchers' duel as Ida Grove Gomaco defeated Council Bluffs Stork Club 2-0 in the finals of the Lincoln AAA invitational softball tournament.

Hurlers Bob Hoyt of the Stork Club and Gene Knop of Ida Grove were locked in a scoreless game until the bottom of the sixth inning when Hanson came up with his game-winning heroics.

Hoyt got into trouble when gritty catcher Jerry Bohnet was unable to field a high-bouncing chop in front of home plate.

Earl Tunure followed, hitting a grounder to firstsacker Rick Mitchell. Mitchell however opted to go to second base and threw the ball away to move the runners to second and third.

Hoyt then decided to walk Hanson. His second pitch was close to the plate however and on the third pitch Hanson reached out and stroked the ball to right field, scoring Smith and Tenure.

Hoyt, who had pitched and won three games earlier Sunday, offered no excuse on the play.

"I just got it in too close," he said. "I had thought we'd come up with every weird way to lose a game but this tops it."

Both Hoyt and Knop were outstanding in the tournament. Hoyt, selected the most valuable player, batted .317 and won five games for the Stork Club, striking out 57 batters in 40 innings.

Knop, voted the tourneys outstanding pitcher, worked only twice for the unbeaten Ida Grove team but allowed just four hits in 14 innings fanning 26. Knop however had to weather two serious Stork club threats to gain the win.

In the second inning Knop walked the first two batters however, Dan Englund was thrown out trying to advance to second on a passed ball for the first out.

In the top of the sixth Bob Burns, who along with Jim Piazza starred at the plate for the Stork Club in the tourney, led off with a single.

He advanced when Knop threw the ball away on a fielders' choice.

Knop struck out the next batter and then intentionally walked the bases loaded, setting up a force play.

The strategy worked as Piazza hit a ball to the shortstop Al Stoner who threw out Burns at the plate and then Knop struck out Bohnet to extinguish the Stork Club's final threat.

Morgan, Perez Riddle Braves

By United Press International

Joe Morgan collected three hits, including a homer, and drove in two runs in the opener and Tony Perez hit a leadoff homer in the 12th inning of the nightcap Sunday, pacing the Cincinnati Reds to a doubleheader sweep over the Atlanta Braves, 4-2 and 2-1.

The double victory enabled the Reds to regain second place in the National League West.

Morgan's two-run homer capped a three-run first inning and helped Roger Nelson to his fourth victory. Perez's homer in the nightcap, his 12th of the year, came off reliever Joe Niekro and helped reliever Pedro Borbon to his sixth triumph.

In other NL action, Los Angeles edged San Francisco 4-3, Montreal downed St. Louis 4-2, Houston whipped San Diego 8-2 and Chicago defeated Pittsburgh 7-3. New York at Philadelphia was rained out.

Pinch-hitter Ken McMullen delivered a run-scoring single with one out in the ninth inning, enabling the Dodgers to sweep their three-game series with the Giants. Mike Marshall, appearing in his 45th game, beat the Giants for the third straight day and boosted his record to 7-3. Steve Garvey hit his 14th homer for the Dodgers.

Tim Lincecum's single in the ninth inning drove home the tie-breaking run as the Expos defeated the Cardinals. Ken Singleton also singled home a run in the ninth for Montreal, which became the first team to score against the Cardinals' bullpen in the last 31 appearances. Hal Breeden and Bob Bailey homered for Montreal.

Cesar Cedeno and Bob Watson homered to lead the Astros to victory over the Padres. Claude Osteen, used in relief the previous 13 days, went the distance for Houston to gain his sixth win against seven losses. George Gross had four hits for the Astros, who handed Dave Freisleben his third loss in nine decisions.

Bill Madlock, Rick Monday and Don Kessinger each drove in two runs to pace Chicago's triumph over Pittsburgh. Bill Bonham went eight innings, striking out nine, for the Cubs to gain his fifth win in 15 decisions.

McDaniel Paces KC Past Oakland, 4-1

By United Press International

Veteran Lindy McDaniel, making one of the rare starts in his 20-year major league career, stopped the Oakland A's on three infield singles Sunday to halt the Kansas City Royals' three-game losing streak and give them a 4-1 victory.

George Brett batted in two runs with one of his three singles as the Royals scored four times in the third inning off loser Glenn Abbott.

McDaniel, making only his second start of the season—both against Oakland—permitted only two base runners in recording his first victory in three decisions.

In other games, New York beat Detroit 4-1 but the second game of the doubleheader was postponed by rain, Chicago won 2-1 before bowing 4-3 to Minnesota, Boston routed Cleveland 8-0 and Milwaukee ripped Baltimore 9-4.

Rudy May, making his debut with New York, tossed a four-hitter and Bobby Murcer knocked in two runs to lead the Yankees over the Tigers. Murcer doubled in Lou Piniella from first with the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning and scored an insurance run moments later on a single by Chris Chambliss. May, acquired from the California Angels on June 15, struck out nine and walked three while evening his record at 1-1.

Darrell Porter hit a grand slam homer and Don Money added a solo shot, powering the Brewers to their victory over the Orioles and helping Clyde Wright to his first triumph since May 25. Porter's smash came with two out in the first inning following walks to Don Money and Bobby Mitchell and a single by George Scott. Money's seventh homer of the season concluded the Brewers' scoring in the eighth.

Rick Wise, making his first start since May 24, combined with Dick Drago on a four-hitter and Rico Petrocelli blasted two tape measure home runs to lead the Red Sox. Wise, who was on the disabled list, allowed only the Indians two hits, both singles, in five innings of work in his first appearance since breaking a finger in a freak home accident.

Danny Thompson's triple in the seventh inning followed by Steve Brye's single scored the winning run to give Minnesota a victory over Chicago after the Twins had come from behind to tie the score in the sixth on a single by Brye, a walk to Jerry Terrell and Bobby Darwin's 10th homer.

The White Sox won the first game behind the four-hit pitching of Stan Bahnsen. Bahnsen walked three and struck out four to even his record at 7-7. The White Sox scored the winning run in the fourth on a single by Carlos May, an error by shortstop Luis Gomez, a fielder's choice and a wild pitch by loser Joe Decker.

In night action, California was at Texas.

Arcia Single Saves Omaha

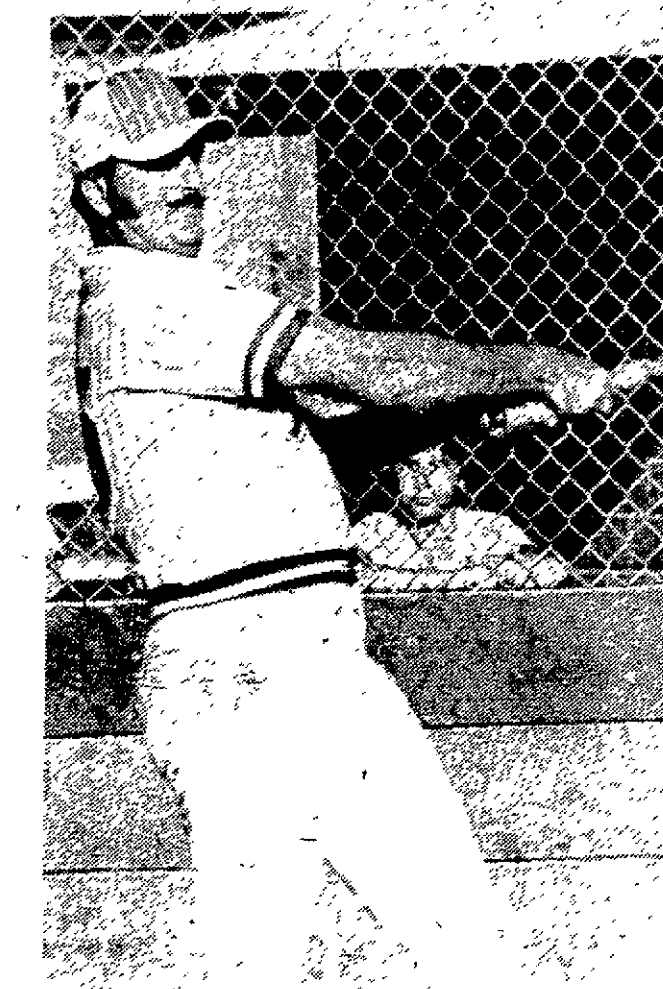

Omaha (AP) — Jose Arcia singled in the winning run with the bases loaded in the 10th inning Sunday night to cap a 12-11 victory for Omaha in a 37-hit slugfest with Oklahoma City.

Each player on the teams hit safely in the three-hour 16 minute contest. Omaha had 20 hits to 17 for Oklahoma City. Omaha leftfielder Gary Rahe had five, two doubles and three singles.

The Omaha victory evened the series at 2-2.

Wade Sets Midwest Record With Victory

By BOB MOYER

Lincolnite Joe Wade established himself as the star super stock car driver at Midwest Speedway Sunday night when he breezed to a record fourth consecutive main event win.

Wade, who also took the lead in the point standings from David City's Terry Richards, captured a grand slam Sunday night, winning his heat, the trophy dash and the feature.

He started in the next-to-last row and quickly moved up, passing Jay Sterns coming out of the second turn on the eighth lap and then stretched his lead the rest of the way.

"We haven't made any major adjustments since last week," said Wade, "I'm satisfied with the way the car's running now."

But coming out of the fourth turn at the end of the second lap Bowes' car had a flat tire forcing him out of the race and moving Jay Sterns up to the lead.

Wade, working up from the pack moved up to second and Sterns' car was not equal to the challenge from Wade's as Joe took Sterns up high and then dropped under him on the eighth lap to take a lead he never relinquished.

Wade noted that patience was the most important thing in getting out of the pack.

"I just try to take my time and pick my way thru," he said.

Dave Kaut of Council Bluffs captured the B feature and Dan Watts won the hobby A feature.

Jerry Willis racing at Midwest for the first time since being in an accident in which he rolled his car several times, turned in a creditable job of racing and finished second in the hobby main.

The next racing in Lincoln will be Wednesday night at Midwest Speedway when the sprint cars return to action.

WTT Unloads First Bombshell At ATP With $10 Million Suit

LONDON (AP) — John Newcombe, Tom Okker and other leading tennis players found themselves caught up Sunday—the eve of the Wimbledon Championships—in a new war of rival factions.

The Wimbledon event, affected by bans and boycotts the last two years, will not be involved. Strong fields are entered in both men's and women's events.

World Team Tennis, a 16-city franchise concept in the United States, dropped a bombshell over the weekend by announcing a $10-million damage suit against Jack Kramer and Donald Dell, officials of the Association of Tennis Professionals, and the Commercial Union, an insurance company that sponsors leading tournaments.

George MacCall, commissioner of WTT, charged, "serious evidence has been brought to the attention of the league that the defendants have conspired to destroy WTT."

Specifically cited was the action of the Italian and French championships in banning WTT players from their tournaments, including Jimmy Connors, co-holder of the No. 1 ranking in the United States, and Australia's Evonne Goolagong.

The two, winners of the Australian titles earlier this year, were barred at Paris, thus being deprived a chance of winning the Grand Slam—Australian, French, Wimbledon and U.S.—and a $125,000 prize.

The suit posed a problem of allegiance for players, such as Newcombe and Okker, belonging to both groups.

A number of WTT players attended an early meeting at a London hotel at which the $10-million suit was announced and then moved upstairs to an ATP conclave at which players voted unanimously to back the ATP's officers, Kramer and Dell.

Kramer, one of the game's greats, is director of the players' group. Dell, an attorney who handles business affairs for Stan Smith, Arthur Ashe and others, is the legal counsel.

Cliff Drysdale, who plays with the Miami WTT team, offered the resolution backing ATP officers and expressing regret for the action by the WTT.

"This move is divisive for the game," Drysdale said. Ian Tiriac, Romanian Davis Cup veteran who plays for the Boston Lobsters, said, "It is a disaster."

Other WTT players who backed the vote of confidence for Kramer and Dell included Okker, a Hollander who plays for Buffalo-Toronto; South Africa's Ray Moore, with Cleveland, and John Alexander, an Australian with San Francisco.

In mid-afternoon, Kramer and Dell issued a statement which said: "It is a sad day for tennis when people who have been in the game for only one year and operating only six weeks see fit to sue one of the greatest friends the game has known, namely Commercial Union."

"But we are very gratified by the reaction of the ATP members who unanimously expressed confidence in the elected members since the activities have always been at the specific direction of the executive board and the entire membership in accordance with the constitution and by-laws."

"We have no further comment until the suit is filed and we can make a study of the pleading of the case."

Richard Evans, British press chief for the players' group, said 78 of the ATP's members attended the meeting and supported Kramer and Dell without dissent. The ATP includes most of the top male tournament players of the world.

WTT has a total of 96 players, including women, playing in 16 cities. MacCall said the bans imposed on Connors and Miss Goolagong at Paris and Rome affected all of these.

"Neither the 16 WTT owners nor their players will tolerate this kind of closed shop," MacCall said.

Both Kramer and Dell denied any collusion with promoters and Kramer said, "This is regrettable, it's bad for the game."

Many European promoters oppose WTT because they consider team tennis a threat to the circuit. The International Lawn Tennis Federation and WTT came to an agreement earlier at which WTT agreed to pay a $46,000 sanction fee.

MacCall said the fee has not been paid because the ILTF, of which Italy and France are members, have not kept the bargain.

Bill Schoen of Hawaii, Ray Iccolo of Boston and Richard Butera of Philadelphia, all WTT franchise owners, insisted there would be no disciplinary action against WTT players who voted with the ATP group.

"All we want is free determination, let players play where they want to and open tournaments for all," said Schoen.

Shoemaker Triumphs

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Tree of Knowledge, figured the No. 3 horse in an entry of three, pulled a major surprise Sunday to win the $150,000 Hollywood Gold Cup and bring jockey Bill Shoemaker his sixth triumph in this feature of the season at Hollywood Park.

Tree of Knowledge also rewarded trainer Charles Whittingham with his fourth straight Gold Cup in surprising

Garretts Take Doubleheader

Lincoln Garretts swept a doubleheader from the Tam O'Shanter behind the tough pitching of Luann Raasch and Beth Richards, 9-4, 7-5, in AA Western's Softball season Sunday.

Raasch who pitched 6 1/3 innings in the first game aided the Garretts with two triples and one single, while allowing only five Tam O'Shanter hits.

A two run single by Dot Neill put Garretts into the lead in the fifth inning of the second game and a bases loaded single by Rhonda Hoins iced the game for Garretts.

Richards, who pitched 19 strikeouts in 22 1/3 innings for Garretts in four other games this weekend, held the Tam O'Shanter to only four hits in the winning cause.

TIME OUT

Dana Outlook Bright

The athletic program at Dana College appears to be well on the way to better days with the recent announcement of the hiring of Gary Seever as football and track coach.

Earlier this spring the Vikings hired Ernie Abariotes as wrestling coach and both Seever and Abariotes have the qualities and proven records to build winners.

Seever is a younger brother of John, who is the football coach at Concordia and that should bring about one of the most interesting rivalries matching brothers in the same conference and sport.

In fact it was John that informed Gary of the football position at Dana. Both the Seever brothers are graduates of Concordia and play football there.

However, John graduated in 1952 and Gary in 1957, so the two never played on the same team for the Bulldogs. Now they'll be one of the few brothers in the nation to face each other as coaches.

Concordia and Dana play Oct. 5 at 2 p.m. in Blair this season and hopefully the game will draw a lot of attention because neither Gary or John think second place.

It may take Gary and Abariotes a couple of years to build successful programs at Dana. The Vikings have finished last in the conference all-sports race for the three years it has been kept.

The wrestling team has fared fairly well, but has been hurt by not competing in every weight class and those forfeits have hurt the team's overall performance.

The Dana track team will need the biggest rebuilding job. The Vikings failed to score in the indoor meet and only managed one fifth place in the outdoor meet.

Abariotes No Stranger

There have been only five or six athletes out for track at Dana the past few years, which is probably the biggest reason the Vikings haven't done better.

Abariotes is a 1967 Dana graduate and has spent a lot of time at the Blair school since his graduation helping out, so his presence isn't new and he's well liked by the student body.

Gary isn't exactly a foreigner to the Vikings since he competed against them in his college days at Concordia and Paul Peterson didn't have any trouble remembering that when Seever's application arrived.

Peterson, the athletic director at Dana, was coaching the Vikings' athletic teams that played against Concordia teams when Gary was in college.

A successful athletic program is essential to attracting more students, which is very vital to keeping the college in good financial condition and this is why Dana officials say they hired Seever and Abariotes.

Seever had league champion football teams at high schools in both Chicago and Milwaukee, while Abariotes was coach of the year for southwestern Iowa.

It should be quite a challenge for Abariotes and Seever to build winning programs because the Nebraska Inter-collegiate Athletic Conference is quite competitive.

There is also good balance in the conference, except Dana hasn't shared in winning like the other schools. The Vikings have only won a couple of conference titles and usually are last in many sports.

However, the college administration has taken the proper steps to get the Blair school to win its share of games and conference titles by hiring successful coaches.

Rain Delays Foyt's Qualifying

MOUNT POCONO, PA (AP) — A J. Foyt will have to wait until Thursday to prove again that he has the fastest car in championship auto racing.

Rain wiped out the second day of qualifying Sunday for the June 30 Schaefer 500-mile race, leaving the 39-year-old Texan one of two drivers of note who do not have spots in the 33-car lineup.

Officials of the Pocono International Raceway and the United States Auto Club announced that qualifications will be re-opened Thursday—which also is "carburetor day"—to add the final five drivers to the starting field.

It will be a "no bump" session meaning that the 28 drivers who qualified for the lineup Saturday cannot be ousted from their starting positions by faster cars—even the legendary Foyt.

Bobby Unser, who for years has been the acknowledged "speed merchant" of USAC championship racing, captured the pole position for the $400,000 race with a four-lap speed of 182.500 miles per hour.

Unser, however, admitted he got the top starting spot somewhat by default.

Foyt, who had held the front row pole position in both of USAC's previous championship 500s this year, had his chance at the front row here during good weather Saturday, but blew it when a valve broke in the engine of his Gilmore Racing Team Coyote.

He had clocked 185.759 m.p.h. on his first lap. The valve broke on his second circuit of the 2.5-mile tri-oval dropping his speed to 180.723 m.p.h. Still not sure what had happened, Foyt completed the third lap of his four-lap run at a comparatively slow 178.642, then brought the car back to garage area.

His crew, aided by mechanics from other teams, needed less than two hours to replace the engine and, with just over an hour of qualifying time left, Foyt still had a chance to make another run for the pole.

But a series of mishaps shut the track down at intervals and the 6 p.m. closing time arrived with the Texan still sitting at the line waiting.

"I have no doubt he could have beaten me," Unser said. "I ran as hard as I could during my four laps, and it wouldn't have been enough had Foyt completed his run like he started."

The other front-row spots went to Steve Krisloff, a young Parsippany, N.J., driver, and Wally Dallenbach, a veteran from East Brunswick, N.J. driving identical Patrick Racing Team Eagles. Krisloff's speed was 182.269 m.p.h. and Dallenbach's 182.020.

Gordon Johncock, Johnny Rutherford and Al Unser make up the second row, all with speeds in excess of 180, while third-row starters will be Tom Sneva, Mario Andretti and Mike Mosley.

The 28 first-day qualifiers averaged 175.288 m.p.h. Also left at the line Saturday was Roger McCluskey, the 1973 USAC driving champion. His new Riley-Offy exploded an engine while he was trying to qualify.

Nebraska Gals Win

Phoenix, Ariz. (AP) — The Nebraska Track Club won the Junior AAU Women's Championship at Phoenix Saturday.

The Nebraska team placed third in the final event, the mile relay, for a total of 90 points. Second in the 36-team field with 89 points was Rialto, Calif., which was fourth in the mile relay.

Nebraskas won four events.

Nancy Kindig of Hastings took the long jump at 18 feet 5½ inches. Donna Short of McCook won the shot at 38 feet 6½ inches, the 880 relay team of Debbie Quillen of Dix, Karol McKenzie of Elwood, Cindy Tatum of North Platte and Debbie Esser of Woodbine, Iowa, placed first at 1:45.5, and Claudie Stahmer of Omaha won the 12-13-year-old long jump at 16-10½.

Mary Lou Jasnoch of Oshkosh, won the 100-yard dash last year, was not eligible to run again in the event. She entered the 220 and posted the day's fastest time of .24.6, but then was ruled ineligible in all the sprints because of her 100 triumph last year.

The 16-member Nebraska team goes to Bakersfield, Calif., for the National AAU girls meet Tuesday and Wednesday and the National Women's AAU meet Friday and Saturday.

Fly Fishing Show To Be Broadcast

A lesson in the art of fly fishing from world authority Leon Chandler will be offered on the "Championship Fishing with Virgil Ward" show on channel 13 at 5 p.m. next Sunday afternoon.

Your new car will self-destruct in three years.

Or less. From rust.

No, your car is not rustproofed at the factory. Any factory. And undercoating alone may do more harm than good.

Have your car rustproofed by Ziebart.

We start by covering the entire underside with a sealant that locks itself in place and remains moisture-proof indefinitely.

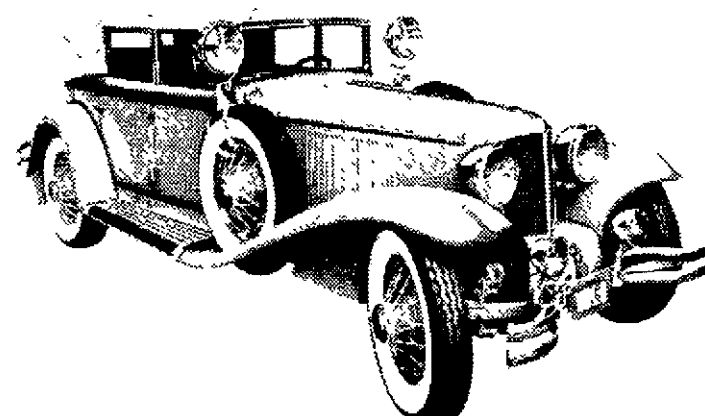

Then our factory-trained men use special tools to spray our sealant into all of the hidden and boxed-in sections of a car's unitized body, where rust damage begins. The Ziebart sealant reaches every critical rust area and works so well that we guarantee your new car against rust-through for 5 years or 50,000 miles. Or your money back.

And that makes us the only people in town who can guarantee in writing that your new car won't self-destruct before it's even paid for.

Holland, Sweden Score Wins

By Associated Press

The Netherlands, Sweden and Argentina each swept into the second round of the World Cup soccer tournament in West Germany Sunday.

Holland, led by the brilliant Johan Cruyff, slammed Bulgaria 4-1 in Group 3 at Dortmund.

Sweden, setting up old-fashioned attacks on the wings after two scoreless ties, beat Uruguay 3-0 in the same group at Duesseldorf.

Argentina overcame Haiti 4-1 at Munich and took second place in Group 4, where Poland completed a perfect record with a 2-1 win over Italy at Stuttgart.

The Poles had previously made sure of a second round place. Argentina's goal spree gave it a one-goal margin over Italy on over-all aggregate.

The eight qualifiers for the second round were East Germany and West Germany from Group 1, Yugoslavia and Brazil from Group 2, the Netherlands and Sweden from Group 3 and Poland and Argentina from Group 4.

The second round, which begins Wednesday, will be played in two new groups, with the two winners meeting in the final at Munich's Olympic Stadium July 7.

The tournament opened up as a spectacle Sunday as teams went all out for goals.

More than 30,000 Dutch fans were at Dortmund to see their orange-shirted heroes trounce Bulgaria. This game produced the first penalties of the World Cup—both for Holland in the first half. Johnny Neeskens and Ajax Amsterdam scored on both of them.

Johnny Rep scored the third Dutch goal in the 71st minute and Theo De Jong the fourth two minutes from the end.

With the score 3-0, Holland's Ruud Krol put the ball into his own net for a presentation goal to Bulgaria.

The Swedes, with 8,000 supporters waving yellow and blue flags, were tied 0-0 at halftime against Uruguay. In the second half Sweden attacked on the wings—something that is seldom seen in World Cup soccer nowadays. The switch in tactics brought three fine goals—two by Ralf Edstroem and one by Roland Sandberg.

Hector Yazalde scored twice and led Argentina to its 4-1 triumph over unrated Haiti. Argentine fans were armed with portable radios and roared with excitement every time their team scored and also when they heard news of goals against Italy, their closest rivals in Group 4.

Rene Houseman and Ruben

Ayala scored the other Argentine goals. Haiti lost all three of its games and scored only two goals.

As things turned out, Argentina needed every one of its goals. It finished its threematch program with an aggregate of 7-5 compared with Italy's 5-4.

Poland, winner of the 1972 Olympic tournament from which the highly paid professional teams of Western Europe and South America are barred, was the only country to finish the first round with three wins out of three.

The Poles displaced a fine all-round team against Italy, which left out famous stars Gianni Rivera and Gigi Riva. Poland swept to a 2-0 halftime lead with goals by Andrzej Szarmach and the captain, Kazimierz Deyna. Szarmach now has scored five times and is top scorer in the tournament.

Haynie Tops Carner To Capture LPGA

SUTTON, Mass. (UPI) — Sandra Haynie frittered five of a seven stroke lead on the last six holes, but held off JoAnn Carner with a par on the 18th Sunday to win the $50,000 LPGA Championship at Pleasant Valley Country Club by two strokes.

The victory gave Miss Haynie a $7,000 payday and winnings of $12,700 in the past two weeks. A week ago Sunday, she beat Gloria Ebert in a sudden death playoff in the Lawson LPGA Open at Medina, Ohio.

Mrs. Carner, who now has three firsts and a second in her last six tournaments, finished the day with a one-under-par 72 and a runner-up total of 290. Miss Palmer, who had a tournament record of 66 in Friday's round, finished one stroke back at 291.

Not one other player in the field of 88, that was cut to 61 after two rounds, was able to equal par 292 on the grueling 6,130-yard course. Rain on Friday and cold, drizzly conditions Sunday made the usually tough course even more unmanageable.

Highway Program 'Won't Be Same'

By United Press International
Federal officials have been "messing around" with Nebraska's Highway Safety Program and as a result, no matter how it is salvaged, it just won't be the same, according to an Exxon administration official.
"I think it would be safe to say that our Highway Safety Program will not be as effective as it would have been had they not started messing around," said William Hopper, an administrative assistant to Gov. J. James Exon, in an interview.
"But I can say that no matter what does eventually happen, this administration is dedicated to salvaging whatever we can," Hopper said, adding, "The governor has made this a personal thing."

The axe was scheduled to fall on the program June 30 when federal transportation officials said they intended to withdraw federal financing.

$7 Million Loss
In addition, the federal government threatened the loss of 10% of Nebraska's highway construction allocation for a total loss to the state of about $7 million.

The reason was the failure of the legislature to pass this year a motorcycle helmet law and a law covering training and certification of ambulance drivers and attendants.

Hopper said a temporary stay has been granted on practically a day to day basis beyond June 30 pending further reviews in Washington.

He said for the time being, the Gubernatorial Offers Spicy Debates

By EDWARD W. HOWARD
Associated Press Writer
Political debates, taking one with another, are usually as exciting as cold oatmeal.
But the candidates in this year's race for the governor's chair may offer the electorate a few sessions worth listening to.
The added ingredient that could throw a little spice into the whole thing is the candidacy of State Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, the Legislature's only black senator.

The fact that Chambers is black doesn't have anything to do with it, but the fact that he is generally considered a debater of the first caliber does.

Given his public statements, Gov. J. James Exon, the Democratic incumbent, is willing to share a debate platform with anybody and everybody.

It is Exon who has continued to insist that he wants Chambers, who hopes to have his name on the ballot as an independent, participate in debate.

That leaves State Sen. Richard Marvel, who carries the GOP mantle, who is informed on the issues and he is an experienced debater. He says he wants to debate Exon head to head and show the voters what he thinks is the governor's weak first-term record.

Exon smiles at that, and says he'll stand by his record and his administration.

If we can venture into punditry, we would describe Chambers as a debater in the style of H. L. Mencken. His knowledge of subject matter is accented by an often sharp wit, and he can make an opponent who isn't well prepared look absolutely foolish.

Exon's debating style was well displayed when he opposed former Republican Gov. Norbert Tiemann. Tiemann frankly showed disdain for Exon, and in effect told the voters that the now-incumbent was a know-nothing where government was concerned.

Exon countered, in large part, by his straightforward approach to the voters.

In effect, Exon said, "Look, I'm just a working man like you, and you know how these politicians like to act like we don't have any sense at all."

It would seem Exon's confidence in his own style played a major role in bucking for a space for Chambers in debates.

There is no questioning the fact that Exon is a popular governor.

If Chambers were to sail into Exon full speed, the governor could probably count on that "son of the soil" style of his to salvage the day, if not win it.

Besides, Exon firmly believes that his administration has given

$6.6 Billion Tax Cut Facing Senate Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a week-long filibuster, the Senate is to vote on a proposed $6.6 billion tax cut Monday, with prospects for approval considered dim.

Backers, including Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., were reported pessimistic on winning approval for the entire package, but still hopeful of getting parts of it passed.

The tax vote heads a week of activity in Congress that is to include House hearings on whether President Nixon's announced U.S. nuclear power aid to Egypt and Israel could lead to nuclear weapons development in the Middle East.

The House impeachment inquiry is to decide Monday whether to call witnesses as its next step. The Judiciary Committee which is conducting the inquiry completed its first-phase, six-week review of impeachment evidence Friday.

Exemption Boosted
The proposed $6.6 billion tax cut would boost the personal tax exemption to $325 from the present $750, and give poor people the alternative of taking a $190 tax credit directly out of their taxes due. It would also pay a 10 per cent work bonus to working families with incomes up to $4,000 a year.

Kennedy said last week that accompanying tax revision including a minimum tax on rich people and repeal of the oil depletion allowance would pay $4 billion of the $6.6 billion tax cut the first year.

He contended the tax cut would stimulate the nation's economy against recession and give taxpayers relief from inflation.

But opponents including Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said the tax cut itself could have a disastrously inflationary impact.

The hearings on whether U.S.-provided nuclear power plants could lead to nuclear weapons in the Mideast are to be conducted jointly by the House foreign affairs subcommittees on the Near East and on international organizations.

Answers Wanted
Chairmen Lee H. Hamilton, D-Ind., and Donald M. Frazier, D-Minn., said in a joint statement the questions they want answered include:

— How effectively can any negotiated safeguards now insure that power plants will not give the Egyptians and Israelis ability to develop nuclear safeguards in the future?

— What could the United States do if either country decided after the U.S. power plants were in place to denounce the safeguards and begin developing weapons?

White House assistant Leonard Garment said Sunday the safeguards will include supervision by U.S. technicians at the plants to prevent the Arabs or Israelis from using the plutonium produced to develop nuclear weapons.

Garment was interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Flood Kills 40 In Bangladesh

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — Forty persons were reported dead and 50,000 homeless as heavy rains engulfed the hilly Chittagong district in southeastern Bangladesh, officials said Sunday.

They said the death toll could go higher due to landslides like one that killed 13 men, women and children Friday in Chittagong, Bangladesh's main port 150 miles from Dhaka. Fifteen persons were reported killed in Chittagong, when a house collapsed, authorities said.

Flood wastes the main road from Chittagong to Cox's Bazar, the country's main beach resort.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
